Executive and Independent Agency Publications: Where to Get Official Documents

Summary

This is a directory of sources that congressional offices may use to obtain publications from the Executive Office of the President, the executive departments, and the independent agencies and commissions of the federal government. Also included is information on the Superintendent of Documents, the U.S. Government Printing Office, and the federal government's printing policies; suggestions on what to do when a publication is out of print; and information on where copies of government publications may be obtained on the Internet.

The information for each agency includes address, telephone number, fax number, and Internet e-mail address and Web site, where available. Also included are selected notes on special publications, availability of catalogs, etc., as provided by the agency itself. This report is produced for the use of congressional offices only and will be updated every year.

Please Note:

Federal government agencies change their telephone numbers and other contact information from time to time. Therefore, the information is subject to change. If the number has been changed, there may be a recording referring to the new number. If this is not the case, the caller may have to telephone the appropriate congressional liaison office, government operator, or area code plus 555-1212 to obtain the agency's correct number.

Kristen Bini provided research assistance for this report.

Introduction

The Congressional Research Service receives numerous congressional inquiries asking, “Where is the best place to get copies of government documents?” “Where do we call to get published material for constituents?” “How can you tell what’s available for giveaway?” This manual will help answer these kinds of questions.

Government publications needed by congressional offices may be conveniently divided between those published by Congress itself and those prepared by the various executive and independent agencies. Many of these publications are now available electronically on computer databases and a growing number of Internet Web sites, for both Congress and executive branch agencies. These sources vary in reliability and ease of use, and often change their addresses without warning. Internet and computer database information is included below. Specific Web sites, where available, are included in the listings for the specific agencies.

Printed congressional publications are sometimes supplied to the offices automatically. Numbered congressional reports and documents are usually available from the House Legislative Resource Center (LRC)/House Document Room and the Senate Document Room; committee prints and hearings can be obtained from the issuing committees. These are not generally available from the Congressional Research Service, except on a loan basis. Both the LRC/House Library (ext. 6-5200) and Senate Library (ext. 4-7106) or the Law Library of the Library of Congress (ext. 7-2700 or 7-5080) will also supply copies of hearings and committee prints to Members on loan.

The publications from the executive and independent agencies are more difficult to obtain because of the multiplicity of sources involved. It is with these that this manual is concerned. The most appropriate places to call are listed below, and we recommend consulting them in the following sequence:

The Executive or Independent Agency That Issued the Publication

A few agencies in the federal government conduct general publication programs, preparing and distributing pamphlets to the public. These agencies receive appropriations for this purpose, and the resulting publications are stocked and distributed by the information offices within the agencies themselves.

Many of the agencies, however, do not distribute their own publications, but prepare them with the expectation that they will be placed on sale and distributed by the Superintendent of Documents. These agencies do not receive appropriations to stock their publications in any quantity and, as a rule, must refer public requests for them to the U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO). These agencies retain a limited number of their publications for official use within the agency, and it is their usual practice to share this supply with Members of Congress. This source is addressed in the directory that follows.

In this publication, we have compiled information from over a hundred of the larger executive branch bureaus and departments, as well as the independent agencies. In each case, the agency was asked to furnish us with the address, telephone number, fax number, and Internet e-mail and Web addresses, if available, of the proper unit from which to request publications. Information on publications of particular interest to Members of Congress is sometimes included in the notes.

Without exception, every agency indicated its willingness to serve congressional offices to the limit of its ability. In every case, we were assured that any publications they had available could be sent to a Member for personal use, and the majority of the offices indicated their desire to assist the Member with constituent requests. Limitations based on security classifications, scarcity, or unusual expense are occasionally encountered.

All agencies are limited in the number of publications they can distribute by Paragraph 39 of the February 1990 Government Printing and Binding Regulations published by the Joint Committee on Printing, S.Pub. 101-9, 101st Cong., 2nd Sess. 21 (1990).

Departments shall not make free distribution of any publication to any private individual or private organization in quantities exceeding 50 copies without prior approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. This quantity limitation shall not apply when the production cost of the publications to be distributed is less than $100.

In the ensuing pages, the organizations are listed alphabetically within the following major categories:

- ! Executive Office of the President
- ! Executive departments
- ! Independent agencies and commissions

The table of contents lists the agencies as they appear within this categorical structure. The index lists all agencies alphabetically, using variant names and key words where useful.

The Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office

The Superintendent of Documents maintains a constantly changing stock of approximately 21,000 different titles, which are distributed for sale to the general public. Rather than attempting constant revision of a single catalog of these titles, the Superintendent prepares a variety of lists which identify government publications currently in print by subject. These printed Subject Bibliographies are frequently revised and are available for free distribution to a Member's office on request, by telephone (202) 512-1808 or by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Document Sales Service, Washington, D.C. 20401. (Note: Members may also wish to refer their constituents to one of the 24 GPO bookstores located in major cities in the United States. A list of these with addresses may be found in the United States Government Manual.) Offices that are unable to secure titles requested by a constituent may wish to send instead the appropriate Subject Bibliography. This will either identify the title required or list similar material which the constituent can secure by sending the order blank included in the Subject Bibliography and a remittance directly to the Superintendent of Documents.

If an office has been unable to secure a publication it needs from the issuing agency and wishes to purchase it, a copy can be bought from the Superintendent of Documents in the same manner as the general public. In some cases, a book exchange arrangement carried on by the Documents Control Branch of the Superintendent of Documents may be helpful. Under this agreement it is sometimes possible for a Member to exchange publications he has received by allotment for other publications of equal value which may be needed. An office wishing further details on this program should call the Government Printing Office at (202) 512-1808.

The Government Printing Office also provides access on the Internet to a wide variety of government publications, from both the legislative and executive branches of government, at its Web site [<http://www.access.gpo.gov>].

What to Do When a Publication Is Out of Print and Unavailable

Occasionally a needed publication is no longer available at either the executive or independent agency or the Government Printing Office. Here are a few suggestions for such cases:

- ! If the title is required for office use by the Member or his/her staff, it can be borrowed from the Library of Congress, if it is available, for a limited period of time. A staff member with loan privileges may request the publication by telephoning ext. 7-5445.
- ! If the publication is needed for a constituent, he or she can be referred to the nearest federal depository library. This will be one of more than 1,300 libraries throughout the country in which certain government publications are preserved and made available for public use. A listing of these depository libraries appears in Federal Depository Libraries Directory (1999) and may be obtained by calling Library Programs Services (GPO) at (202) 512-1119.

Those with Internet access can also locate depository libraries by state or telephone area code by searching the Federal Depository Library Program Web page at [http://www.gpo.gov/su\_docs/locators/findlibs/index.html]. While many depository libraries will have copies of the Congressional Record and the serial documents of the Congress, there will be occasions when the title requested is not a depository item. To determine whether a needed publication is likely to be available, the office may wish to call (202) 512-1119 and ask about its depository status. In addition, Members of Congress can obtain information concerning the designation of libraries as federal depositories by calling (202) 512-1119. Designation Handbook for Federal Depository Libraries is available upon request.

- ! If the requesting constituent appears to be a scholar engaged in serious research, the office may wish to recommend pursuing the publication through an interlibrary loan. To secure such service the constituent should ask a local librarian to borrow the publication either from the nearest depository library (if there is none available in the community), from the state library, or through the extension service of the state college or university. If the title is of such a specialized nature that it cannot be secured from one of these, the local librarian can request "location information" from the nearest regional union catalog center. This will identify the most convenient copy to borrow.

The Internet, a Source for Executive or Independent Agency Publications

The publications of executive branch departments and other government agencies are becoming increasingly available on the Internet as these agencies have created their own home pages on the Web. Many government agencies now make the full text of their documents available on the Internet before the printed text is obtainable from the agency or through GPO. This report includes Internet addresses, provided by the agencies or obtained from other sources, available at the time of writing.

Sources for Internet Links to Executive and Independent Agencies

The following Web sites provide additional access to a large number of federal government Web pages. These are excellent sources for the most current listing of Web sites added since the publication of this report.

First Gov

This federal government Web site is designed to provide the public with easy, one-stop access to online U.S. federal government sources.

[<http://www.firstgov.gov/index.html>]

U.S. Federal Government Agencies Directory

This directory is a service of the Louisiana State University Libraries. Based on the agency listings of the United States Government Manual, this service provides links to numerous federal government agency Web sites.

[<http://www.lib.lsu.edu/gov/fedgov.html>]

Library of Congress

“Official U.S. Executive Branch Web Sites” is the title of a “Resource Internet Page” on the Library of Congress Home Page; it provides numerous links to executive branch and independent agency Web sites, with direct access to many of the subsidiary agency publications.

[<http://lcweb.loc.gov/global/executive/fed.html>]

Computer Access and Support

Computer terminals that provide immediate access to the Internet are available for staff use in the CRS research centers in the Rayburn and Longworth House Office Buildings and the Russell Senate Office Building. The La Follette Congressional Reading Room in the Madison Building also has computers for use by congressional staff.

Both the House and Senate provide computer support to congressional offices. For Members, committees, and staff of the House, House Information Resources (HIR) provides a comprehensive group of information and research sources especially designed for Members, committees, and staff. For Senators, committees, and staff, the Senate Computer Center provides a comprehensive group of information and research sources. Training classes and a user assistance hotline for Senate staff are available.

Note: The Consumer Information Center (CIC) publishes and distributes the free, quarterly Consumer Information Catalog, available by writing to: Consumer Information Catalog, Pueblo, Colorado 81009, or by telephoning 1-888-8PUEBLO (1-888-878-3256). The catalog lists more than 200 selected booklets of consumer interest published by more than 40 federal government agencies. Topics covered include children, cars, employment, education, food and nutrition, federal programs, health, money, small business, and more. Nearly half of the publications listed are available free; the remainder are moderately priced.

One can also browse the latest Catalog, read and/or download text versions of the publications, order a copy of the Catalog, and view the latest consumer news by visiting CIC's Web site: [<http://www.pueblo.gsa.gov>].

Members of the House and Senate are able to personalize copies of one of the four quarterly editions of the Consumer Information Catalog. This "personalized" version enables the Representative or Senator to print a personal message to his or her constituents using the CIC's printer. Contact the Consumer Information Center at (202) 501-1794 for more information.

Groups who are able to distribute 20 or more copies of the Consumer Information Catalog quarterly can be placed on a mailing list for free bulk copies. Write to the Pueblo address above or visit the Web site to be placed on this list.

In addition, Members of Congress may also obtain copies of the Lista de Publicaciones Federales en Espanol para el Consumidor, a list of publications available in Spanish. The Consumer Information Center is administered by the General Services Administration (see entry below).

Most documents originated by NRC, or submitted to it for consideration, are placed in the Commission's Public Document Room on the lower level at 2120 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., for public inspection. In addition, documents related to a specific licensing proceeding or operation are made available in the local public document room established in the vicinity of each proposed or existing nuclear facility. More than 100 such rooms are now open to the public. Congressional offices may contact the NRC at the above number to determine the location of the most convenient document room for any interested person.

Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission

Office of Information

1120 20th Street, N.W., Ninth Floor

Washington, D.C. 20036-3419

Internet: [<http://www.oshrc.gov>]

Tel: (202) 606-5398

Fax: (202) 606-5050

Note: The Review Commission is the independent federal agency that resolves legal disputes between private employers and another agency, the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), over allegations that work place safety or health violations exist. The Review Commission frequently receives requests from congressional staffers with constituent complaints about working conditions. These types of requests usually require information from the agency that inspects work places and promulgates the regulations covering job safety and health conditions. That agency is OSHA. As an adjudicatory agency, the Review Commission's involvement in work place issues begins after an inspection has been contested by an employer or employees' group.

Three publications that OSHRC produces are A Guide to Procedures, Rules of Procedure of the OSHRC, and Guide to E-Z Trial Procedures.
