

Formulation and Content of the Budget Resolution

Bill Heniff Jr.

Analyst on the Congress and Legislative Process

May 1, 2007

Congressional Research Service

7-5700

www.crs.gov

98-512

Summary

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Titles I-IX of P.L. 93-344, 88 Stat. 297-332) established the concurrent budget resolution as the centerpiece of the congressional budget process. The annual budget resolution is an agreement between the House and Senate on a budget plan for the upcoming fiscal year and at least the following four fiscal years. As a concurrent resolution, it is not sent to the President for his signature and thus does not become law. The budget resolution, however, provides the framework for subsequent legislative action on the annual appropriations bills, revenue measures, debt-limit legislation, reconciliation legislation (if required), and any other budgetary legislation. Consequently, the President may be drawn into negotiations with Congress on the budget resolution. For more information on the budget process, see <http://www.crs.gov/products/guides/guidehome.shtml>.

Contents

Formulation of the Budget Resolution.....	1
Content of the Budget Resolution.....	1

Contacts

Author Contact Information	2
----------------------------------	---

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Titles I-IX of P.L. 93-344, 88 Stat. 297-332) established the concurrent budget resolution as the centerpiece of the congressional budget process. The annual budget resolution is an agreement between the House and Senate on a budget plan for the upcoming fiscal year and at least the following four fiscal years. As a concurrent resolution, it is not sent to the President for his signature and thus does not become law. The budget resolution, however, provides the framework for subsequent legislative action on the annual appropriations bills, revenue measures, debt-limit legislation, reconciliation legislation (if required), and any other budgetary legislation. Consequently, the President may be drawn into negotiations with Congress on the budget resolution. For more information on the budget process, see <http://www.crs.gov/products/guides/guidehome.shtml>.

Formulation of the Budget Resolution

The House and Senate Budget Committees are responsible for developing and reporting the budget resolution. In formulating the budget resolution, the Budget Committees hold hearings and receive testimony from Members of Congress and representatives from federal departments and agencies, the general public, and national organizations. Three regular hearings include separate testimony from the director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), the director of the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), and the chair of the Federal Reserve Board. The OMB director provides an explanation of the President's budget submission; the CBO director presents an analysis of the President's budget proposals and independent baseline budget projections; and the Federal Reserve chair provides an assessment of the state of the national economy.

Another source of input comes from the "views and estimates" of congressional committees with jurisdiction over spending and revenues. Within six weeks after the President's budget submission, House and Senate committees are required to submit views and estimates of budget matters under their jurisdiction to their respective Budget Committees (Section 301(d) of the Budget Act). These views and estimates, frequently submitted in the form of a letter to the chair and ranking member of the budget committee, typically include comments on the President's budget proposals and estimates of the budgetary impact of any legislation likely to be considered during the current session of Congress. The budget committees are not bound by these recommendations. The views and estimates often are printed in the committee report accompanying the budget resolution or compiled as a separate committee print.

Content of the Budget Resolution

Section 301(a) of the 1974 Budget Act, as amended, requires that the budget resolution include the following matters for the upcoming fiscal year and at least the ensuing four fiscal years:

- aggregate levels of new budget authority, outlays, the budget surplus or deficit, and the public debt;
- aggregate level of federal revenues and the amount, if any, by which the aggregate level of federal revenues should be increased or decreased by legislative action;
- amount of new budget authority and outlays for each of the major functional categories; and

- for purposes of Senate enforcement rules, Social Security outlays and revenues (although these amounts are not included in the budget surplus or deficit totals due to their off-budget status).

In addition, Section 301(b) of the Budget Act lists several other matters that may be included in the budget resolution. The most important of these optional matters is the inclusion of reconciliation directives. These instructions direct one or more committees to report legislation containing recommended changes to substantive law to meet the levels of spending, revenues, and the public debt limit set forth in the budget resolution.

Section 301(e)(2) of the Budget Act requires that the report accompanying the budget resolution include the following information:

- a comparison of total new budget authority, total outlays, total revenues, and the surplus or deficit for each fiscal year set forth in the budget resolution with those requested in the budget submitted by the President;
- the estimated levels of total new budget authority and total outlays, divided between discretionary and mandatory amounts, for each major functional category;
- the economic assumptions that underlie the matters set forth in the budget resolution and any alternative assumptions and objectives the Budget Committee considered;
- information, data, and comparisons indicating the manner in which, and the basis on which, the Budget Committee determined each of the matters set forth in the resolution;
- the estimated levels of tax expenditures by major items and functional categories for the President's budget and in the budget resolution; and
- the committee spending allocations, commonly referred to as Section 302(a) allocations after the applicable section of the Budget Act.

Author Contact Information

(name redacted)
Analyst on the Congress and Legislative Process
/redacted/@crs.loc.gov, 7-....

EveryCRSReport.com

The Congressional Research Service (CRS) is a federal legislative branch agency, housed inside the Library of Congress, charged with providing the United States Congress non-partisan advice on issues that may come before Congress.

EveryCRSReport.com republishes CRS reports that are available to all Congressional staff. The reports are not classified, and Members of Congress routinely make individual reports available to the public.

Prior to our republication, we redacted names, phone numbers and email addresses of analysts who produced the reports. We also added this page to the report. We have not intentionally made any other changes to any report published on EveryCRSReport.com.

CRS reports, as a work of the United States government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.

Information in a CRS report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to members of Congress in connection with CRS' institutional role.

EveryCRSReport.com is not a government website and is not affiliated with CRS. We do not claim copyright on any CRS report we have republished.