House Committees: Categories and Rules for Committee Assignments

Introduction

Both House and party rules detail procedures for committee assignments. House rules address the election and membership of committees, especially limitations on membership. The Democratic Caucus and Republican Conference rules designate categories of committees (shown below) and specify service limitations in addition to those in the House rules.

Number of Assignments

- In general, no Member, Delegate or Resident Commissioner can serve on more than two standing committees and four subcommittees of those standing committees (House Rule X, clause 5(b)(2)(A)).
- Democrats and Republicans designate exclusive committees and generally limit service to one such panel. Democratic Members of exclusive committees cannot also serve on nonexclusive committees, but they can serve on the Budget or House Administration Committee. Further, Democratic Members who served on the Homeland Security Committee in the 108th Congress are entitled to continue to serve on that committee during the 109th and 110th Congresses. Republican Members assigned to the Rules Committee can take “leave with seniority” from one standing committee to serve on Rules.
- Democrats and Republicans designate nonexclusive committees and limit Members to service on two such panels, unless the House rules contain other requirements.

Limitations on Assignments

- Service on the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is exempt from the two-committee limitation. Service is also limited to three Congresses during any five successive Congresses. (House Rule X, clause 5(a)(3)(B)). Democratic Caucus rules, however, limit service to no more than three Congresses in any five.

- Budget Committee members are limited to no more than four Congresses in any six successive Congresses (House Rule X, clause 5(a)(2)(B)). Democratic Caucus rules limit members to no more than three Congresses in any five. Members may serve for one additional Congress as chair or ranking member if they assumed leadership in their fourth term on the committee.
- Intelligence Committee members are limited to no more than four Congresses in any period of six successive Congresses. There is no term limit for Members selected to serve as chair and ranking member. (House Rule X, clause 11). In addition, Democratic Caucus rules say Members may not serve on more than one standing committee, although they may take a leave of absence from service on another standing committee to serve on the Intelligence Committee.
- “Any other exception to these limitations must be approved by the House upon the recommendation of the respective party caucus or conference.” (House Rule X, clause 5.)
