Summary

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA; P.L. 111-148), as amended by the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act (HCERA; P.L. 111-152), authorizes new funding for numerous existing discretionary grant and other programs and activities. PPACA, as amended, also creates a number of new discretionary grant programs and activities and provides for each an authorization of appropriations. Funding for all of these programs and activities is subject to action by congressional appropriators. This report summarizes all the discretionary provisions in PPACA for which appropriations are authorized. A companion product, CRS Report R41301, Appropriations and Fund Transfers in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), summarizes all the mandated appropriations and Medicare trust fund transfers in the new law.

Among the provisions that are intended to strengthen the nation's health care safety net and improve access to care, PPACA permanently reauthorizes the federal health centers program and the National Health Service Corps (NHSC). The NHSC provides scholarships and student loan repayments to individuals who agree to a period of service as a primary care provider in a federally designated Health Professional Shortage Area. In addition, the new law seeks to address concerns about the current size, specialty mix, and geographic distribution of the health care workforce. It reauthorizes and expands existing health workforce education and training programs under Titles VII and VIII of the Public Health Service Act (PHSA). Title VII supports the education and training of physicians, dentists, physician assistants, and public health workers through grants, scholarships, and loan repayment. PPACA creates several new programs to increase training experiences in primary care, in rural areas, and in community-based settings, and provides training opportunities to increase the supply of pediatric subspecialists and geriatricians. It also expands the nursing workforce development programs authorized under PHSA Title VIII to bolster undergraduate and graduate nursing education and training.

As part of a comprehensive framework for federal community-based (i.e., public health) prevention activities, including a national strategy and a national education and outreach campaign, PPACA authorizes several new grant programs with a focus on preventable or modifiable risk factors for disease (e.g., sedentary lifestyle, tobacco use). The new law also leverages a number of mechanisms to improve the quality of health care, including new requirements for quality measure development, collection, analysis, and public reporting; programs to develop and disseminate innovative strategies for improving the quality of health care delivery; and support for care coordination programs such as medical homes, patient navigators, and the co-location of primary health care and mental health services.

Additionally, PPACA authorizes funding for programs to prevent elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation; grants to expand trauma care services and improve regional coordination of emergency services; and demonstration projects to implement alternatives to current tort litigation for resolving medical malpractice claims, among other provisions.

The new law also reauthorizes the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (IHCIA), which sets out the national policy for Indian health care and authorizes programs and services provided by the Indian Health Service. For more information on PPACA's Indian health provisions, which are not discussed in this report, see CRS Report R41152, Indian Health Care Improvement Act Provisions in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA).

Introduction

On March 23, 2010, President Obama signed into law a comprehensive health care bill, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA; P.L. 111-148).¹ The following week, on March 30, 2010, the President signed the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (HCERA; P.L. 111-152), which amended various health care and revenue provisions in PPACA.² Among its many provisions, PPACA, as amended by HCERA, creates a mandate for most U.S. residents to obtain health insurance and provides for the establishment of insurance exchanges through which certain individuals and families will be able to receive federal subsidies to reduce the cost of purchasing that coverage. The new law also expands eligibility for Medicaid; amends the Medicare program in ways that are intended to reduce the growth in Medicare spending that had been projected under preexisting law; and imposes an excise tax on insurance plans determined to have high premiums.

In addition, PPACA amends and authorizes new funding for numerous existing discretionary grant and other programs and activities, primarily ones authorized under the Public Health Service Act (PHSA). While the authorization of appropriations for most of these programs expired prior to PPACA's enactment, many of them have continued to receive an annual appropriation. PPACA also authorizes a number of new discretionary programs and activities and provides for each an authorization of appropriations. Funding for all of these discretionary programs and activities is subject to action by congressional appropriators. However, it is often the case that new programs and activities face more of a challenge in securing funding than do existing ones with an established appropriations history.

This report summarizes all the discretionary provisions in PPACA for which appropriations are authorized. The provisions are grouped by general topic in a series of tables. Each table entry includes the following information: (1) the PPACA section number; (2) an indication of whether the provision modifies the PHSA (or another law) either by amending an existing section or subsection or by adding a new one, or whether it creates new stand-alone statutory authority, as well as the name (if known) of the administering agency or office; (3) a brief description of the program or activity, including the FY2010 appropriation amount for existing programs and activities that received such funding;³ (4) where applicable, the types of entities and/or individuals eligible for funding;⁴ and (5) details of the authorization of appropriations. Some authorizations of appropriations specify funding levels for one or more fiscal years, while others authorize the appropriation of "such sums as may be necessary" (SSAN) to carry out the program or activity. In some instances, the authorization of SSAN does not specify any fiscal years. Unless otherwise stated, references in the tables to the Secretary refer to the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS).

⁴ Not applicable if the funding is to support programs and activities carried out by a federal agency.

Separate from the discretionary funding authorities discussed in this report, PPACA also includes a number of provisions that mandate appropriations or require the Secretary to transfer amounts from the Medicare Part A and Part B trust funds to support new or existing grant programs and other activities. Those provisions are summarized in a companion product, CRS Report R41301, Appropriations and Fund Transfers in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA).
