CRS Report for Congress

Prepared for Members and Committees of Congress

The House of Representatives has published information about its current procedures in three primary sources: a House manual, a book on House procedure written for everyday use, and a set of House precedents. The predecessors to these compilations also remain valuable for some purposes. These documents can enable Members and staff to study the House's rules and precedents and to gauge how they are likely to apply in various circumstances.

During the first session of every Congress, the House publishes the House Rules and Manual, formally entitled Constitution, Jefferson's Manual, and Rules of the House of Representatives. Each clause of the rules is followed by notes, prepared by the House parliamentarian, that summarize the most important precedents and interpretations relating to that clause. The Rules and Manual also contains a summary of recent changes in the House's rules and provisions of law that establish expedited procedures by which the House can act on certain kinds of measures. The volume begins with the annotated text of the Constitution and excerpts from Thomas Jefferson's Manual of Parliamentary Practice. It is distributed to Members when published.

In 2011, the House published the latest version of House Practice: A Guide to the Rules, Precedents and Procedures of the House, by Wm. Holmes Brown, Charles W. Johnson, and John V. Sullivan, each former parliamentarians of the House. In more than 900 pages, this book explains all aspects of the House's procedures in considerable detail. The book is organized alphabetically by topic, beginning with "Adjournment" and ending with "Withdrawal." House Practice, first published in 1997, and again in 2003, is the successor to Procedure in the House of Representatives, published in 1982 and with Supplements published in 1985 and 1987, and to Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives, last published in 1963.

The precedents established by the House and its presiding officers since the mid-1930s are in the process of being published. To date, 17 volumes have been released. The first nine are entitled Deschler's Precedents of the United States House of Representatives; the next seven volumes are called Deschler-Brown Precedents, and the most recent volume is called Deschler-Brown-Johnson Precedents, in recognition of the contributions made to the House by Lewis Deschler, Mr. Brown and Mr. Johnson, all House Parliamentarians. Additional volumes in this series will be published as they are completed.

This collection includes an exhaustive compilation of procedural rulings and interpretations, accompanied by summaries of the events producing them. They often also include relevant excerpts from the Congressional Record and its predecessors. Precedents from earlier periods are found in the 11-volume set of Hinds' Precedents of the House of Representatives published in 1907 and Cannon's Precedents of the House of Representatives, published in 1936, indexed jointly. Both collections of precedents are organized topically, beginning with the first meeting of the House at the beginning of a new Congress and continuing through the various stages of the legislative process.

For most purposes, the most effective research strategy likely is to begin with an examination of House Practice, followed by the House Rules and Manual, and then Deschler's Precedents. The parliamentarian and his assistants welcome direct inquiries (at 225-7373) from Members and staff.

The rules adopted by the House's committees also can prove useful. They are compiled and published for each Congress in Rules Adopted by the Committees of the House of Representatives, a committee print of the House Rules Committee.¹
