Summary

The United States is the single largest contributor to the United Nations (U.N.) regular budget. As such, Members of the 113th Congress will likely continue to demonstrate an interest in the United States' assessment level, the cost of the U.S. assessment each year, how U.S. contributions to the regular budget compare to those of other countries, and how assessment levels have changed over time.

This report provides the assessment level, actual payment, and total outstanding contributions for the United States and other selected U.N. member states from 1990 to 2010—the last year for which data are publicly available. In 2010, the United States was assessed to pay 22% (or $532,435,102) of the regular budget. The next largest contributors were Japan (12.53%), Germany (8.018%), the United Kingdom (6.604%), and France (6.112%).

This report is updated annually, or as the U.N. document upon which the data are based is published.

Background

Members of Congress have demonstrated an ongoing interest in annual U.S. contributions to the United Nations (U.N.) regular budget, which funds core activities for U.N. organs such as the General Assembly and Security Council,¹ staffing and administration at U.N. headquarters, international conferences, human rights promotion, and U.N. special political missions, among other things. Over the years, Congress has focused on

- the overall cost of the U.S. assessment to the regular budget per year, as well as any outstanding contributions;
- how the United States assessment compares to the assessments of other U.N. member states; and
- how the United States' payment of its assessed contributions over time compares with other U.N. member states.

In 2010—the last calendar year for which data are publicly available—the United States was the single largest contributor to the regular budget, paying $532,435,102, or 22%, in assessed contributions.² The next largest contributors were Japan (12.530%), Germany (8.018%), the United Kingdom (6.604%), and France (6.123%). Seventeen countries, including the United States, were assessed at over 1%, representing about 83% of the total regular budget. Ten countries were assessed between 0.5% and 1%, accounting for about 7% of the budget. The rest of the U.N. membership (167 countries) accounted for about 8% of the regular budget.

This report highlights, for each of the past 20 years, payments and the total outstanding contributions of the top contributors to the U.N. regular budget—including the United States. For additional information on U.S. funding of the U.N. system, see CRS Report RL33611, United Nations System Funding: Congressional Issues, by (name redacted).

Explanation of Tables

The enclosed tables list the assessment level, actual payment, and contributions outstanding of key contributors to the U.N. regular budget from calendar years 1990 through 2010. Most countries pay their assessment in full during the calendar year. Other countries, however, (including Argentina, Brazil, Ukraine, USSR/Russian Federation, and the United States) have on occasion failed to pay the entire assessment and maintained unpaid or outstanding contribution balances. Consequently, the annual payments listed may not always match the assessment for any given year.

¹ Article 7 of the U.N. Charter defines the principal organs of the United Nations as the General Assembly, Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council, the International Court of Justice, and the Secretariat.

² Prior to January 1, 2001, the assessment level for the United States was 25%. Starting January 1, 2001, the United States was assessed to pay 22% of the U.N. regular budget. This change, adopted by the General Assembly, was in response to U.S. efforts to satisfy the conditions set by Congress for release of funds appropriated for U.S. payment of its arrearages to the U.N. regular budget and U.N. peacekeeping accounts. Detailed information on this congressional action can be found under the heading, “The Helms-Biden Agreement and Payment of Arrears” in CRS Report RL33611, United Nations System Funding: Congressional Issues, by (name redacted).

Determining Scale of Assessments

Article 17 of the U.N. Charter specifies that the U.N. General Assembly will determine the basis for payment of the expenses of the organization and the Assembly has decided that these expenses will be assessed “broadly according to capacity to pay.” An 18-member expert Committee on Contributions meets annually to review the scale of assessments. Every third year, the committee reevaluates the scale in preparation for a General Assembly decision approving the scale for the following three-year period. On December 24, 2009, the 64th session of the General Assembly adopted a revised scale for the years 2010-2012. While the U.S. assessment remained at 22%, the assessment levels increased or decreased for at least 138 countries.

To determine the scale of assessments, the Committee on Contributions uses estimates of each member state’s gross national product (GNP) and a number of adjustments, including data for external debt and for low per capita incomes. The General Assembly has directed that percentage shares range from a minimum of 0.001% to a maximum of 22%, and a maximum of 0.01% for those nations designated as “least developed countries.” According to the United Nations, the 22% ceiling for the largest contributor benefits the United States, “whose share of total membership GNP is approximately 27 percent.”

Each table is divided into four columns, described below.

- Countries—Contributing countries are grouped into key categories: (1) the “United States”; (2) “Other Major Contributors,” which are countries assessed at more than 1%; (3) “Middle Contributors,” a new category created in 2004 that provides data on nations that are assessed at 0.5% and over but less than 1%;³ and (4) “Rest of Membership,” which lists overall contributions from the remaining member states.
- Assessment—The percentage of the U.N. regular budget at which a country is assessed.
- Payment—Country payments to the U.N. regular budget that have been received and duly recorded as of December 31 of each calendar year (assessed contributions received after that date are reported in the next statement on the status of contributions).
- Contributions Outstanding—Total outstanding contributions represent money owed by a country as of December 31 of that year. It includes both current year and prior year contributions outstanding.

Four of the five permanent U.N. Security Council members are identified in each table, and information on the fifth permanent Council member, China, is provided in a footnote. China is included among the major contributors starting in 2001, when its assessment level first exceeded 1%.

³ This group includes three countries that formerly were assessed at 1% or over.

EveryCRSReport.com

The Congressional Research Service (CRS) is a federal legislative branch agency, housed inside the Library of Congress, charged with providing the United States Congress non-partisan advice on issues that may come before Congress.

EveryCRSReport.com republishes CRS reports that are available to all Congressional staff. The reports are not classified, and Members of Congress routinely make individual reports available to the public.

Prior to our republication, we redacted names, phone numbers and email addresses of analysts who produced the reports. We also added this page to the report. We have not intentionally made any other changes to any report published on EveryCRSReport.com.

CRS reports, as a work of the United States government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.

Information in a CRS report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to members of Congress in connection with CRS' institutional role.

EveryCRSReport.com is not a government website and is not affiliated with CRS. We do not claim copyright on any CRS report we have republished.
