

Congressional Research Service

Informing the legislative debate since 1914

Disaster Unemployment Assistance (DUA)

(name redacted)

Specialist in Income Security

June 23, 2015

Congressional Research Service

7-....

www.crs.gov

RS22022

Summary

Disaster Unemployment Assistance (DUA) benefits are available only to those individuals who have become unemployed as a direct result of a declared major disaster. First created in 1970 through P.L. 91-606, DUA benefits are authorized by the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Relief Act (the Stafford Act), which authorizes the President to issue a major disaster declaration after state and local government resources have been overwhelmed by a natural catastrophe or, “regardless of cause, any fire, flood, or explosion in any part of the United States” (42 U.S.C. 5122(2)).

The DUA program provides income support to individuals who become unemployed as a direct result of a major disaster and who are not eligible for regular Unemployment Compensation (UC) benefits. DUA is funded through the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and is administered by the Department of Labor (DOL) through each state’s UC agency. DUA beneficiaries (because they are not entitled to regular UC) are not eligible to receive Extended Benefits (EB).

This report contains information on how to ascertain if an individual is eligible for DUA benefits.

Contents

DUA Eligibility.....	1
Time Limit.....	2
Eligibility Clarification.....	2
DUA Benefit Calculation.....	3
Reduction in DUA Benefits.....	4
Patterns in DUA Benefits.....	4
How to Find out If DUA Is Available for a Major Disaster in a State.....	5

Figures

Figure 1. Disaster Unemployment Assistance: Initial Claims and First Payments, January 2001–December 2014.....	5
--	---

Tables

Table 1. Disaster Unemployment Assistance Benefit Payments, FY2004-FY2014.....	4
--	---

Contacts

Author Contact Information.....	6
---------------------------------	---

Disaster Unemployment Assistance (DUA) benefits are available only to those individuals who have become unemployed as a direct result of a declared major disaster.¹ First created in 1970 through P.L. 91-606, DUA benefits are authorized by the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Relief Act (the Stafford Act), which authorizes the President to issue a major disaster declaration after state and local government resources have been overwhelmed by a natural catastrophe or, “regardless of cause, any fire, flood, or explosion in any part of the United States” (42 U.S.C. 5122(2)). Based upon the request of the affected state’s governor, the President may declare a major disaster. The declaration identifies the areas in the state eligible for assistance. The declaration of a major disaster provides the full range of disaster assistance available under the Stafford Act, including, but not limited to, the repair, replacement, or reconstruction of public and non-profit facilities, cash grants for the personal needs of victims, housing, and unemployment assistance related to job loss from the disaster.

The Unemployment Compensation (UC) program generally does not provide UC benefits to the self-employed, to those who are unable to work, or to those who do not have a recent earnings history.² However, when the President declares a major disaster, victims who would typically be ineligible for UC may be eligible for DUA.

DUA benefits are funded through the Disaster Relief Fund administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). The funds are transferred to the Department of Labor (DOL) and then distributed by DOL to each affected state’s UC agency.³

DUA Eligibility

The individual eligibility requirements for DUA differ from the UC program requirements. For example, eligibility for DUA benefits does not necessarily require that the individual have a substantial work history and in some cases does not require that the worker be available for work (unlike the UC program requirements). In particular, the DUA regulation defines eligible unemployed workers to include

- the self-employed;
- workers who experience a “week of unemployment” following the date the major disaster began when such unemployment is a direct result of the major disaster;
- workers unable to reach the place of employment as a direct result of the major disaster;
- workers who were to begin employment and do not have a job or are unable to reach the job as a direct result of the major disaster;

¹ Authorization for DUA can be found in the Stafford Act, Section 410, P.L. 100-707, 42 USC 5177. Regulations can be found at 20 CFR 625.

² For basics on the UC program, see CRS Report RL33362, Unemployment Insurance: Programs and Benefits, by (name redacted) and (name redacted)

³ For a description of the FEMA disaster declaration process, see CRS Report R43784, FEMA’s Disaster Declaration Process: A Primer, by (name redacted).

- individuals who have become the breadwinner or major support for a household because the head of the household has died as a direct result of the major disaster;⁴ and
- workers who cannot work because of injuries caused as a direct result of the disaster.

Just as is the case in the state UC programs, workers who do not have permission to work legally in the United States are not eligible for DUA benefits. Non-citizens must have a Social Security number and an alien registration card number in order to apply for DUA benefits.

Time Limit

Generally, applications must be filed within 30 days after the date the state announces availability of DUA benefits. When applicants have good cause, they may file claims after the 30-day deadline. This deadline may be extended. However, initial applications filed after the 26th week following the declaration date will not be considered.

Eligibility Clarification

On November 13, 2001, DOL issued a new interpretive rule clarifying the definition of the phrase “unemployment as a direct result of the major disaster.” DOL issued this clarifying rule because the September 11, 2001, disasters presented a number of exigencies not anticipated by the existing regulations. The action by DOL amended 20 CFR §625.5 by adding a new paragraph (c) to read as follows:

§625.5 Unemployment caused by a major disaster.

(c) Unemployment is a direct result of the major disaster. For the purposes of paragraphs (a)(1) and (b)(1) of this section, a worker’s or self-employed individual’s unemployment is a direct result of the major disaster where the unemployment is an immediate result of the major disaster itself, and not the result of a longer chain of events precipitated or exacerbated by the disaster. Such an individual’s unemployment is a direct result of the major disaster if the unemployment resulted from:

(1) physical damage or destruction of the place of employment;

(2) physical inaccessibility of the place of employment due to its closure by the federal government, in immediate response to the disaster; or

(3) lack of work, or loss of revenues, provided that, prior to the disaster, the employer, or the business in the case of a self-employed individual, received at least a majority of its revenue or income from an entity that was either damaged or destroyed in the disaster, or an entity closed by the federal government in immediate response to the disaster.

Prior to the construction of this new rule, the phrase “unemployed as a direct result of a major disaster” had never been defined in the regulations. Although DOL issued the new clarifying rule in the wake of the September 11, 2001, disasters, the rule applies to any subsequently declared major disasters. The rule is intended to make clear a distinction between those individuals unemployed as an immediate result of the disaster itself, and those whose unemployment may have been caused by a long chain of events initiated by the disaster. The rule is also intended to exclude from DUA those individuals whose unemployment is the result of general economic decline that has been an indirect effect of a major disaster.

⁴ The survivor who becomes the head of household is not required to have wage credits and could be eligible for DUA independently of whether the deceased household head would have been eligible for UC benefits.

DUA Benefit Calculation

DUA benefits are generally calculated by state UC agencies under the provisions of the state law for UC in the state where the disaster occurred. The maximum weekly benefit amount is determined under the provisions of the state law. The minimum weekly DUA benefit a worker may receive is half of the average weekly UC benefit for the state where the disaster occurred. In all cases, workers will receive a DUA benefit that is at least half of the average UC benefit for that state and cannot receive more than the maximum UC benefit available in that state. DUA beneficiaries (because they are not entitled to regular UC) are not eligible to receive Extended Benefits (EB).

When a reasonable comparative earnings history can be constructed, DUA benefits are determined in a similar manner to regular state UC benefit rules. Self-employed persons are expected to bring in their tax records to prove a level of earnings for the previous two years. These records would take the place of the employer-reported wage data in UC benefit determination. Likewise, workers who would otherwise be eligible for UC benefits except for the injuries caused as a direct result of the disaster that make them unavailable for work would receive DUA benefits of an amount equivalent to what they would have received under the UC system if they were not injured and were available to work.

Workers who do not have a sufficient employment history to qualify for UC benefits (either as a new worker or as a recent hire) receive a DUA benefit equivalent to half of the average UC benefit for that state. Unemployed workers could also be eligible for reemployment services, which may include counseling and referrals to suitable work opportunities.

DUA assistance is available to eligible individuals as long as the major disaster continues, but no longer than 26 weeks after the disaster declaration.⁵ In the 107th Congress, P.L. 107-154 was signed into law on March 25, 2002, extending the duration of DUA benefits from 26 to 39 weeks for victims of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks in the declared major disaster areas in New York and Virginia. This was the first time legislation extended the duration of DUA benefits. This extension did not apply to any subsequent major disasters.

In the 109th Congress, P.L. 109-176 was signed into law on March 6, 2006, extending the duration of DUA benefits from 26 to 39 weeks for victims of the Hurricane Katrina and Rita disasters. This extension ended on June 3, 2006, for those qualifying for benefits on account of Hurricane Katrina and on June 24, 2006, for those affected by Hurricane Rita. This extension did not apply to any subsequent major disasters.

⁵ In 1970, P.L. 91-606 required that DUA benefits not exceed the maximum amount and duration of the state's UC benefit. This generally required a duration of not more than 26 weeks. Section 407 of P.L. 93-288 in 1974 amended this requirement to a duration not to exceed one year. P.L. 100-707 lowered the maximum duration to 26 weeks.

Reduction in DUA Benefits

DUA benefits may be reduced by other income received by the DUA beneficiary. These reductions are similar to the manner in which such additional income reduces UC benefits (e.g., all states disregard some earnings as an incentive to take short-term work while unemployed workers search for a permanent job), but do not mirror them exactly. The reductions include

- benefits or insurance for loss of wages due to illness or disability;
- supplemental unemployment benefits paid pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement;
- private income protection insurance;
- worker’s compensation or survivor’s benefits if the DUA beneficiary becomes household head due to the head of the household’s death because of the disaster;
- retirement, pension, or annuity income;
- earnings from employment or self-employment; and
- subsidy or price support payments, crops insurance, and farm disaster relief payments.

Patterns in DUA Benefits

When the President declares a major disaster in a state and indicates DUA benefits may be available, the state’s UC agency requests DUA funds from DOL, which in turn receives funds from the Disaster Relief Fund administered by FEMA. The DOL obligates a portion of that request to the state. The state may request more funding as a supplement if needed. Table 1 shows DUA benefit payments from FY2004 through FY2014.

Table 1. Disaster Unemployment Assistance Benefit Payments, FY2004-FY2014

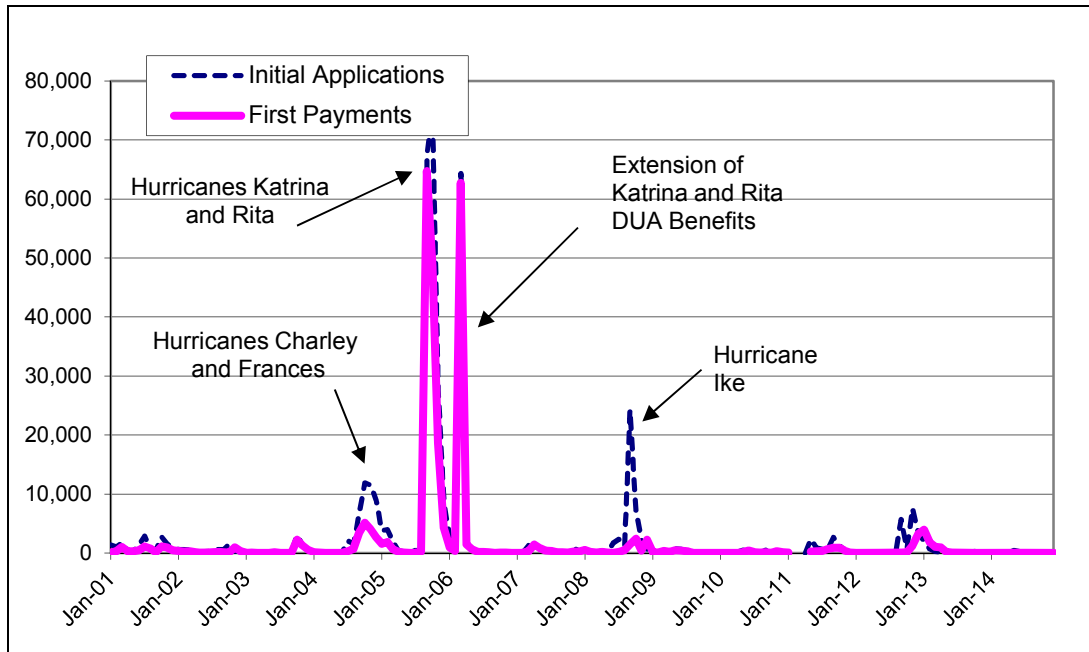

(millions of dollars)

Fiscal Year	Benefit Payments
2004	$7.4
2005	44.6
2006	401.1
2007	9.0
2008	7.0
2009	17.3
2010	1.4
2011	5.5
2012	7.2
2013	15.9
2014	0.9

Source: Department of Labor.

Figure 1 plots the number of individuals who applied for DUA benefits (Initial Claims) and the number of individuals who received DUA benefits for at least one week (First Payments) from January 2001 through December 2014. Just as the case for the UC program, many more individuals apply for DUA benefits than receive them.

Figure 1. Disaster Unemployment Assistance: Initial Claims and First Payments, January 2001–December 2014

Source: CRS figure from data provided by U.S. Department of Labor, Office of Workforce Security.

There is a seasonal element to claims and payments that centers on the hurricane season (running from June 1 to November 30). The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, were the major non-seasonal event during this period not attributable to a natural (weather) disaster. The patterns of initial claims and first payments of DUA benefits on account of the terrorist attacks differ from those in other disasters. Workers continued to apply and receive benefits stemming from the terrorist attacks in substantial numbers through March 2002. This was attributable to the extension of benefits for an additional 13 weeks provided by P.L. 107-154.

The Hurricanes Katrina and Rita disasters overwhelm other disasters in the amount of benefits that were paid. The extension of DUA benefits for an additional 13 weeks allowed workers who would have originally been receiving UC benefits and had exhausted them to file for DUA benefits. This created a second wave of first filings and initial claims in March 2006.

How to Find out If DUA Is Available for a Major Disaster in a State

To determine whether DUA is available in a state, disaster victims must ascertain

- whether the President has declared the event a major disaster;

- for which counties (if any) DUA has been made available; and
- how to contact the state UC agency.

FEMA maintains a website of disasters by calendar year, located at <http://www.fema.gov/news/disasters.fema>. Each disaster is given a “contract number,” which provides a link to relevant information pertaining to each disaster, including a list of counties designated to receive assistance. To determine if DUA is available in a particular county

- choose the “county information” link on the right hand side of the FEMA disasters page
- within the county information will be a statement of whether individual assistance (which includes DUA) is available to individuals of that county
- within the individual assistance, DUA will be listed as an available benefit if it is available to individuals of that county
- persons with a web-enabled mobile device or smartphone may access the site at <http://m.fema.gov/>.

FEMA also provides reference maps indicating which counties have been designated to receive individual (including DUA), public, or hazard mitigation assistance. Subsequent amendments to disaster declarations may be made to add jurisdictions eligible for assistance.

If counties in a state have been included in a major disaster declaration and have been designated to receive DUA, it is necessary to contact the state’s unemployment agency to obtain the particulars of how to apply for and receive DUA benefits. The DOL maintains a website with links to each state’s agency at <http://www.servicelocator.org/OWSLinks.asp>.

Author Contact Information

(name redacted)
Specialist in Income Security
/redacted/@crs.loc.gov, 7-....

EveryCRSReport.com

The Congressional Research Service (CRS) is a federal legislative branch agency, housed inside the Library of Congress, charged with providing the United States Congress non-partisan advice on issues that may come before Congress.

EveryCRSReport.com republishes CRS reports that are available to all Congressional staff. The reports are not classified, and Members of Congress routinely make individual reports available to the public.

Prior to our republication, we redacted names, phone numbers and email addresses of analysts who produced the reports. We also added this page to the report. We have not intentionally made any other changes to any report published on EveryCRSReport.com.

CRS reports, as a work of the United States government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.

Information in a CRS report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to members of Congress in connection with CRS' institutional role.

EveryCRSReport.com is not a government website and is not affiliated with CRS. We do not claim copyright on any CRS report we have republished.