Summary

Since 1970, former Speakers of the House of Representatives have been provided with an allowance after their departure from the House. The allowance was established to assist retiring Speakers in concluding any official business arising from their tenure in the House. Currently, the statutorily authorized allowance is available to former Speakers for office space and furnishings, office operations, franked mail, and staff assistance. Use of the allowance is limited to five years, beginning the day of expiration of a Speaker's tenure as a Representative. Allowances are to be used solely for the administration and conclusion of matters relating to service as a Representative and Speaker of the House.

Legislation to limit or abolish the allowance for former Speakers has been periodically introduced in previous Congresses. On May 8, 2018, the House Appropriations Committee ordered reported the FY2019 legislative branch appropriations bill, which included a provision that would repeal the allowance. It was reported May 21 (H.R. 5894, H.Rept. 115-696). This report will be updated as events warrant.

Introduction

Since 1970, former Speakers of the House of Representatives have been provided with an allowance after their departure from the House. Currently, the statutorily authorized allowance is available to former Speakers for office space and furnishings, office operations, franked mail, and staff assistance. Use of the allowance is limited to five years, beginning the day of expiration of a Speaker's tenure as a Representative. Allowances are to be used solely for the administration and conclusion of matters relating to service as a Representative and Speaker of the House.

Background

Former Speakers of the House of Representatives were first provided with allowances available upon their departure from the House in 1970.¹ H.Res. 1238 (91st Congress) provided former Speakers with federal office space; office furniture, furnishings, and equipment; funds for office expenses, telephone service, stationery, and other office supplies; an administrative assistant and a secretary; and franked mail authority.²

These allowances were originally agreed to by the House on December 22, 1970 (218-69), for the incumbent Speaker, John W. McCormack, who was scheduled to retire from the House two weeks later, on January 3, 1971. With the exception of use of the frank, the allowances were authorized for two years immediately following McCormack's retirement at the conclusion of the 91st Congress. Use of the frank was extended for an additional 18 months beyond the 90 days otherwise allowed Members upon leaving Congress.³

H.Res. 1238 was made permanent law in 1971 (P.L. 91-665).⁴ In 1974, Congress removed the two-year limitation on the allowance.⁵ Current law limits access to these benefits to five years.⁶

¹ Prior to 1970, former Speakers who remained in Congress were provided an extra allowance. Research indicates that the earliest allowances for former Speakers of the House were made available in 1959. Two resolutions adopted that January (H.Res. 88, effective January 12, and H.Res. 89, effective January 7) provided "any Member of the House who had served as Speaker" with funds for the "purchase, maintenance, operation, and driving of an automobile," and an additional $5,000 basic per annum for clerk hire, and in addition an administrative assistant at the basic rate of $8,880 per annum." This allowance was in addition to the staff allowance authorized for a sitting Representative, implying that a former Speaker would have to be a sitting Member to receive an additional clerk hire allowance. At the time, a former Speaker, Rep. Joseph W. Martin, was an incumbent Member of the House. In addition, incumbent Speaker Sam Rayburn was technically a former Speaker because his service as Speaker had been interrupted twice since 1940. Rep. Rayburn was Speaker from September 16, 1940-January 3, 1947, and January 3, 1949-January 3, 1953. His third and final term as Speaker was from January 5, 1955 until his death November 16, 1961. Allowances Available to Former Speakers

Four categories of allowances are currently available to a former Speaker, and include the following:

- An office space and furnishings allowance provides to a former Speaker the use of one office of his or her selection, furnished and maintained by the federal government.⁷
- An allowance for office and other expenses related to the administration and conclusion of official matters arising from a Speaker's service in the House.⁸
- An allowance to use the congressional frank for correspondence and public documents.⁹
- An allowance to hire an administrative assistant¹⁰ and two additional staff members at statutorily designated rates of pay.¹¹

Funding and Restrictions on Use

Funding for the allowance is provided through the annual legislative branch appropriations act. Payments are disbursed by the Chief Administrative Officer of the House; quarterly reporting of these expenditures can be found in the Statements of Disbursements of the House.¹²

Four general restrictions apply to the use of allowances by former Speakers. Allowances are

- limited to five years beginning the day of expiration of a Speaker's term of office;¹³
- not available to a former Speaker who has been expelled from the House;¹⁴
- not available during the period of time in which a former Speaker holds an appointive or elective office or position in or under the federal or District of Columbia government, for which he or she receives pay other than at a nominal rate;¹⁵ and ⁷ 2 U.S.C. §5125.

⁸ 2 U.S.C. §5126. While a former Speaker has been provided with an allowance to support office expenses since 1970, the law governing these expenses has changed over time to reflect the modifications to the underlying laws providing for official office expenses for Representatives. For more information on expenses for Members of the House, see CRS Report R40962, Members' Representational Allowance: History and Usage, by (name redacted).

⁹ 2 U.S.C. §5127.

¹⁰ In the contemporary congressional office, the activities and duties of an administrative assistant are more typically carried out by the chief of staff.

¹⁵ Ibid.

- limited solely to the administration and conclusion of matters relating to a Speaker's service as a Representative and Speaker of the House.¹⁶

In addition, some restrictions apply to specific components of the allowance:

- Rates of pay for a former Speaker's staff are capped at specific levels and steps of the House Employees Salary Schedule.¹⁷
- While no additional statutory restrictions are placed on use of the frank by former Speakers, its use presumably must still comply with rules established by the Commission on Congressional Mailing Standards (the Franking Commission).¹⁸

Efforts to Alter Former Speakers' Allowances

Legislation to limit or abolish allowances for former Speakers has been introduced periodically in previous Congresses.¹⁹ On April 26, 2018, the House Appropriations Legislative Branch Subcommittee met to mark up the FY2019 legislative branch appropriations bill. The bill reported by the subcommittee included a provision to reduce the period of availability of allowances for former Speakers from five years to one year, and would apply to any Speaker whose term of office expired during FY2019 or later.²⁰

On May 8, 2018, the House Appropriations Committee met to mark up the FY2019 legislative branch appropriations bill reported from the subcommittee. A manager's amendment was offered that, among other things, repealed authorizations for former Speakers' allowances entirely, applying to any Member who served in the 115th Congress or any future Congress.²¹ The manager's amendment was adopted by voice vote, and the legislative branch appropriations bill, H.R. 5894, was unanimously ordered reported by the committee. It was reported May 21 (H.R. 5894, H.Rept. 115-696).

¹⁶ 2 U.S.C. §§5125-5128.

¹⁷ 2 U.S.C. §5128. The section also specifies that former Speakers' staff are considered "congressional employees" for benefits including retirement, health insurance, and life insurance.

The proposed changes would not appear to affect privileges and courtesies otherwise extended to Members of the House who leave office, including short-term franking privileges.
