This report provides the results of recent presidential elections in Latin America and the Caribbean. Below are three tables organized by region, that include the date of each country's independence, the name of the most recently elected president or prime minister, and the projected date of the next presidential election. Information in this report was gathered from numerous sources, including the U.S. State Department, Central Intelligence Agency's (CIA's) World Fact Book, International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) Election Guide, Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU), and other news sources.

- a. See CRS Insight IN11184, Argentina's 2019 Elections, by Mark P. Sullivan and Angel Carrasquillo Benoit.
- b. Evo Morales stepped down from office on November 10, 2019, following October 20, 2019, presidential elections that international election observers assert were marred by fraud. Second Vice President of the Senate, Jeanine Áñez, declared herself interim president on November 12, 2019.
- c. On November 23, 2019, Bolivia passed a law that annulled the results of the October 20 elections. On March 22, 2020, Bolivia's Supreme Electoral Tribunal suspended preparations for national elections scheduled for May 3 following a declaration of a two-week national quarantine to prevent the spread of COVID-19. See CRS Insight IN11198, Bolivia: Elections Postponed to October, by Clare Ribando Seelke.
- d. On July 23, 2020, the Supreme Electoral Tribunal delayed the election due to COVID-19 to October 18 as the new date for general elections, which must be approved by the legislative assembly. See CRS Insight IN11198, Bolivia: Elections Postboned to October.
- e. Pedro Pablo Kuczynski was elected president of Peru in June 2016, but resigned on March 21, 2018, just ahead of a vote on impeachment. First Vice President Martín Vizcarra constitutionally succeeded him and is set to fulfill the remainder of Kuczynski's term.
- f. In a controversial move, Venezuela's presidential election was moved earlier from December 2018 to May 20, 2018. Most Venezuelans and much of the international community considered the May 2018 election, in which then-President Nicolás Maduro won reelection, as illegitimate (CRS In Focus IF10230, Venezuela: Political Crisis and U.S. Policy, by Clare Ribando Seelke). The United States and over 50 other countries have recognized Juan Guaidó, elected president of Venezuela's National Assembly in January 2019, as Interim President of Venezuela yet Maduro remains in power.

a. In July 2020, the Nicaraguan government announced a date for the next presidential election. Critics contend the electoral council's resolution is invalid because it contains changes in voting rules that the national legislature is supposed to approve. Note: Although Belize is located in Central America and Guyana and Suriname are located in South America, all three are members of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM).

- a. While elections are expected to take place in November 2020, they are constitutionally due by February 13, 2021. See Economist Intelligence Unit, Belize Country Report, 2nd Quarter 2020.
- b. Cuba does not have direct elections for its head of government. Instead, Cuba's legislature selects the members of the 31-member Council of State, with the president of that body serving as Cuba's head of government and head of state. In April 2019, Cuba's legislature selected Miguel Diaz-Canel for a five-year term. In October 2019, Cuba's legislature appointed Diaz-Canel as president of the republic under Cuba's new constitution.
- c. In April, the Dominican Republic announced that elections would be moved from May to July 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Opposition candidate, Luis Abinader, won the election and is scheduled to assume the presidency on August 16, 2020. See Paola Nagovitch, "The Dominican Republic's 2020 Pandemic Elections," Americas Society/Council of the Americas, July 06, 2020, at https://www.ascoa.org/articles/dominican-republics-2020-pandemic-elections.
- d. The Granger government lost a no-confidence vote in the country's legislature in December 2018. New elections held on March 2, 2020, were marred by fraud allegations. Preliminary data from a recount completed on June 8, 2020, showed that opposition candidate Irfaan Ali won, but Guyana's ruling coalition, led by President Granger, who running for reelection, is rejecting those results, claiming electoral fraud, and pursuing legal challenges. See CRS In Focus IFI1381, Guyana: An Overview, by Mark P. Sullivan.
- e. Haiti held controversial national elections on October 25, 2015. After postponing runoff elections several times, the Provisional Electoral Council announced new presidential elections would take place instead in October 2016; these were delayed for a month due to Hurricane Matthew.
- f. There is a dispute over whether Moïse's five-year term began in February of the year he was elected (2016), or upon his own inauguration in 2017, and would end, respectively, on either February 7, 2021, or February

- g. 7, 2022. As of January 13, 2020, Moïse is ruling by decree. Most of the national legislature's terms expired on that date without the body having passed an elections law to elect new legislators. Parliamentary elections scheduled for October 2019 have been postponed indefinitely. Haiti remains without a functioning legislature to pass new elections laws. See CRS Report R45034, Haiti's Political and Economic Conditions, by Maureen Taft-Morales.
- h. While St. Vincent's government has said elections will be held before the end of 2020, elections are officially due by March 2021. See Economist Intelligence Unit, Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States Country Report, 2nd Quarter 2020.
- i. A coalition of four opposition parties won the most legislative seats in May 2020, On July 13, 2020, the newly elected National Assembly elected Chandrikapersad "Chan" Santokhi as president, who was sworn in on July 16, 2020, succeeding Dési Bouterse who served as president since 2010.
- On July 3, 2020 the prime minister called a general election for August 10, 2020. See "Security & Strategic Review," Latin News, August 2020.
