

IRS Guidance Says No Deduction Is Allowed for Business Expenses Paid with Forgiven PPP Loans

Updated December 10, 2020

The Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act (CARES Act; P.L. 116-136) created Small Business Administration (SBA) Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) loans for payroll expenses and certain operating costs, which are forgiven if the borrower meets certain criteria.

On April 30, 2020, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) issued Notice 2020-32, stating that PPP recipients cannot claim a deduction for expenses funded from forgiven PPP loans.

PPP Forgiveness

Borrowers can apply for forgiveness on the principal and accrued interest if the borrower maintains employment and limits wage decreases.

In general, forgiven debt—“cancellation of indebtedness income” or CODI—is subject to income taxation, unless specifically excluded. Section 1002 of the CARES Act excludes forgiven PPP loan amounts.

Tax Deductibility of Business Expenses

The CARES Act has no language on the deductibility of PPP expenses. Under Internal Revenue Code (IRC) Sections 162 and 163, taxpayers can deduct ordinary or necessary business expenses. However, IRC Section 265\(a\)\(1\) states that an expense cannot be deducted if it is allocable to income exempt from taxation.

Double Benefit

A “double benefit” arises when a taxpayer receives tax-free income (like a forgiven loan) and is also able to claim a tax benefit (like a deduction or a credit) using that income. For example, assume a taxpayer faces a top marginal income tax rate of 37% and takes out a PPP loan for $100,000 that is forgiven by the lender and not subject to tax. The first benefit is a tax-free grant of $100,000. If the taxpayer can also deduct the loan amount as business expenses, a second benefit is $37,000 in tax savings ($$100,000 \times 37\%$).

Congressional Research Service

<https://crsreports.congress.gov>

IN11378

If Congress meant to disallow this “double benefit,” a question can be raised as to why the exclusion of the loan forgiveness was explicitly provided in the legislation. To illustrate, Table 1 assumes a $100,000 forgiven loan, $100,000 of deductible expenses, and a 37% tax rate. The normal treatment in the tax code (the forgiven loan is taxable, and the associated business expenses paid from that loan are deductible) would generate a $37,000 tax liability from that taxation of the CODI (scenario 1). But that amount would be entirely offset by a $37,000 tax savings from deducting the business expenses. Excluding the forgiven loan results in no tax on the income, but allowing deductions provides a tax saving of $37,000 (scenario 2). If, however, the forgiven loan is not taxed and deductions are disallowed, there is no tax on the income or benefit from the deduction. Including the loan in income and allowing deductions (scenario 1) leads to the same outcome as excluding the loan and disallowing deductions (scenario 3). Hence, one could argue that this exclusion was included in the law because it was Congress’s intent to provide this additional benefit.

Table 1. Hypothetical Example of Tax Effect of Disallowing Deductions for Business Expenses on PPP Loans

Tax Scenario	Tax On Income	Tax Savings from the Deduction	Net Tax Effect
1. Normal Tax Treatment	$37,000	-$37,000	0
2. Treatment w/ Exclusion on Forgiven Debt	0	-$37,000	-$37,000
3. Treatment w/ Exclusion on Forgiven Debt and No Deduction	0	0	0

Source: CRS calculations, assuming a $100,000 forgiven loan, $100,000 in deductible business expenses, and a 37% tax rate.

IRS Guidance

IRS Notice 2020-32 (April 30, 2020) disallows deductions for expenses paid for by forgiven PPP loans. Tax filers may need to amend quarterly filings or might challenge this decision in court, although the outcome is not clear. IRS Rev. Rul. 2020-27 (November 18, 2020) states that a taxpayer cannot deduct expenses paid in 2020 if they “reasonably expect” those expenses to be forgiven at a later date. IRS Rev. Proc. 2020-51 (November 18, 2020) provides a safe harbor for PPP borrowers whose loan forgiveness has been denied in part or full, and who wish to file an amended return to claim business deductions.

Some policymakers have expressed concerns with IRS’s position, including the chairs of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees, who have stated that IRS’s interpretation is contrary to congressional intent. The ranking member on the Ways and Means Committee, however, has stated that there was not a clear congressional intent to allow a deduction.

Treatment in Revenue Estimates

According to media reports, the Joint Committee on Taxation indicated in a July 27, 2020, letter to Senator John Cornyn that the revenue estimate for the CARES Act was consistent with its interpretation of the intent of allowing deductibility of expenses, and that legislation affirming the deductibility of expenses would have no revenue effect.

Economic Benefit of PPP Loans

IRS's position would reduce the economic benefit of PPP loans to taxpayers. Businesses could lay off employees and not apply for PPP loan forgiveness. With that said, businesses could still find PPP loans are the most preferable option for short-term economic relief compared to alternative COVID-19 assistance measures.

Options for Congress

If Congress decides that Section 265(a)(1) should be waived for business expenses funded by forgiven PPP loans, it could enact legislation. Congress has enacted exemptions, such as IRC Section 265(a)(6) (mortgage interest and property taxes deductible on a home receiving a tax-free military housing allowance or a parsonage allowance for religious clergy). The Safeguarding Small Business Act (S. 3596), the Heroes Act (H.R. 6800), the Small Business Expense Protection Act (H.R. 6821; S. 3612), and the Safeguarding Small Business Act (S. 3596) would amend the CARES Act to allow taxpayers to receive PPP loan forgiveness without affecting their ability to claim expense deductions. An updated version of the Heroes Act (H.R. 925), which allows deductibility, passed the House on October 1. The December 9, 2020, summary of the Bipartisan Emergency COVID Relief Act of 2020 proposes deductibility.

Author Information

Sean Lowry
Analyst in Public Finance

Jane G. Gravelle
Senior Specialist in Economic Policy

Disclaimer

This document was prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS). CRS serves as nonpartisan shared staff to congressional committees and Members of Congress. It operates solely at the behest of and under the direction of Congress. Information in a CRS Report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to Members of Congress in connection with CRS's institutional role. CRS Reports, as a work of the United States Government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS Report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS Report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain the permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.