Summary

In total, 162 African Americans have served in Congress. This total includes

- 152 African Americans (146 Representatives and 6 Delegates) elected only to the House of Representatives;
- 9 African Americans elected or appointed only to the Senate; and
- 1 African American who has served in both chambers.

The first African American Members, Senator Hiram Revels of Mississippi and Representative Joseph Rainey of South Carolina, both took the oath of office in 1870. These first two Members were among the 22 African American Members (2 in the Senate, 20 in the House) who began their service in the period of time after the Civil War but prior to the start of the 20th century. After these first 22, the presence of African Americans in the membership of Congress was not continuous, and there were subsequent periods in both chambers with no African American Members.

Most recently, the 116th Congress began with the highest number of African American Members ever at the start of a Congress: 57 (52 Representatives, 2 Delegates, and 3 Senators).

Other information in this report includes the following:

- Numbers of African Americans who have served in Congress by party and type of service;
- Numbers of African Americans who have served in each Congress since 1870;
- Numbers of African Americans who have served in the House and Senate by state, district, or territory;
- Means of entry to Congress, including regular elections, special elections, and appointments;
- Brief background and selected data on the Congressional Black Caucus (CBC);
- Lists of selected “firsts” for African Americans in Congress;
- Lists of the African Americans who have served in leadership;
- Records for length of service in the House and Senate; and
- Lists of the African American women in the 116th Congress.

Introduction

The 116th Congress began with 57 African American Members, the highest number ever at the beginning of a Congress. After the death of an African American House Member in October 2019, the current 56 African American Members represent the following proportions of the entire Congress, and of the House and Senate separately:

- 10.1% of voting Members in the Congress (54 of 535, does not include the Delegates and Resident Commissioner);
- 10.4% of total Members in the Congress (56 of 541, includes the Delegates and Resident Commissioner);
- 11.7% of voting Members in the House (51 of 435, does not include the Delegates and Resident Commissioner);
- 12.0% of total Members in the House (53 of 441, includes the Delegates and Resident Commissioner); and
- 3.0% of total Members in the Senate (3 of 100).

Table 1 provides more detail on these African American Members across the 116th Congress.

Notes: Inclusion for this report is based on entry in U.S. Congress, House, Office of the Historian, Black Americans in Congress, at <http://history.house.gov/Exhibitions-and-Publications/BAIC/Black-Americans-in-Congress/>. It does not include additional Members who might identify as African American, or as having African ancestry, but are not included in this publication. See the “Source Note” section for additional information.

The 116th Congress began with 57 African American Members. One African American Member of the House died in October 2019. These numbers include, also based on information from the Office of the Historian, one Senator and one House Member who are of African American and Asian ancestry, and one House Member who is of African American and Hispanic ancestry.

- a. Nonvoting Members may include Delegates and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico. None of the sources used for this report identified an African American Resident Commissioner. All data in this report on nonvoting Members, therefore, refer to Delegates.

In addition to data for the 116th Congress, this report provides historical information. The report also includes an appendix with an alphabetical listing of African American Members, selected biographical information, and committee assignments during their tenure in Congress.

Source Note

Inclusion in this report, and related data, is based on entry in Black Americans in Congress, 1870-2007, the Black Americans in Congress, 1870-2019 e-book,¹ and the accompanying website maintained by the House Office of the Historian and Office of Art and Archives (<http://history.house.gov/Exhibitions-and-Publications/BAIC/Black-Americans-in-Congress/>). According to that office, the website² is based on the 2008 print edition but updated to reflect the entry of new African Americans into Congress. In 2018, at the direction of the Committee on House Administration, the Historian's Office revised and updated the contextual essays of the 2008 print edition in order to prepare the 2019 e-book edition of Black Americans in Congress.

This report does not include additional Members who might identify as African American, or as having African ancestry, but are not included in these sources.

Additional historical information, including committee assignments, leadership positions, and dates of service, is based on Biographical Directory of the American Congress (<http://bioguide.congress.gov>), various editions of the Congressional Directory, and a broad range of Congressional Quarterly Inc. and Leadership Directories Inc. publications.

Brief Overview of Studies on African Americans in Congress

Numerous studies of Congress have examined the role and impact of African Americans in Congress. Many of these studies relate to larger questions about the nature of representation or about Congress as an institution.³

Central to these studies have been questions about the following:

- Descriptive representation (i.e., representation by those who share demographic characteristics with their constituents) and substantive representation (i.e., representation of policy preferences and a linkage to policy outcomes) in the representation of minority electoral and policy interests, as well as any linkage or trade-offs between the two. While the former concentrates on election outcomes

² Available at <https://history.house.gov/historiography.aspx>. The 2008 volume and its predecessors were printed pursuant to concurrent resolutions adopted by Congress periodically since the 1970s:

H.Con.Res. 182, 95th Congress, a concurrent resolution providing for the printing as a House document of the pamphlet entitled "Black Americans in Congress," November 3, 1977. This resulted in the printing of H.Doc. 95-258.

H.Con.Res. 170, 101st Congress, a concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of the book entitled "Black Americans in Congress," November 20, 1989. This resulted in the printing of H.Doc. 101-117.

H.Con.Res. 43, 107th Congress, a concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of a revised and updated version of the House document entitled "Black Americans in Congress, 1870-1989," April 6, 2001. This resulted in the printing of H.Doc. 108-224.

³ The idea of "representation," including its forms and variations, has long been debated among political scientists and political theorists. For a discussion, see Hanna F. Pitkin, The Concept of Representation (Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1967).

(e.g., percentages of congressional seats), the latter focuses on behaviors and actions once an elected official is in office.⁴

- The Voting Rights Act of 1965, impact of majority-minority districts in representing minority interests in a district, and influence of majority-minority districts on electoral and policy preferences in surrounding districts.⁵ These studies have also examined recent court rulings.⁶
- The relationship of minority Members of Congress with their constituents, including any impact on turnout, electoral competitiveness or strategies, hiring of minority staff, communication styles, constituency services, and voter satisfaction and engagement.⁷

African Americans in Congress Since 1870: Totals and in Each Congress

The first African American to serve in the Senate, Hiram Revels of Mississippi, was sworn in on February 23, 1870. The first African American to serve in the House, Joseph Rainey of South Carolina, was sworn in on December 12, 1870.

Both chambers subsequently had periods without any African American Members. The longest period for the House stretched from the 57th Congress (1901-1903) until the beginning of the 71st Congress (1929-1931), or 28 years. The longest period for the Senate stretched from the beginning of the 47th Congress (1881-1883) until the beginning of the 90th Congress (1967-1968), or 86 years.

African American membership in the House first reached 10 Members during the 91st Congress (1969-1970), and voting membership first exceeded 5% during the 100th Congress (1987-1988). Another large increase occurred during the 103rd Congress (1993-1994), which was the first Congress after the redistricting that followed the 1990 U.S. Census.

The 116th Congress began with the highest number of African American Members ever for the start of a Congress: 57 (52 Representatives, 2 Delegates, and 3 Senators).

Table 2 provides a summary of the 162 African Americans who have served in the House, Senate, and both chambers. Of these 162 Members, 22 began their service after the Civil War but prior to the start of the 20th century (2 in the Senate, 20 in the House).

Source: CRS summary, based on entry in U.S. Congress, House, Office of the Historian, Black Americans in Congress, at <http://history.house.gov/Exhibitions-and-Publications/BAIC/Black-Americans-in-Congress/>. Does not include additional Members who might identify as African American, or as having African ancestry, but are not included in this publication. See the “Source Note” section for additional information.

Notes: Three columns include numbers for the House: (1) the number of African American Representatives, (2) the number of African American nonvoting Members (Delegates and Resident Commissioner), and (3) the total number of African Americans in the House.

Totals are provided for (1) the number of African Americans in the House and Senate, not including nonvoting Members; and (2) the number of African Americans in the House and Senate, including nonvoting Members.

For simplification, Congresses are listed in two-year increments. Pursuant to the 20th Amendment to the Constitution, which was ratified January 23, 1933, “the terms of Senators and Representatives [shall end] at noon on the 3rd day of January.” For specific dates, see “Dates of Sessions of the Congress, present-1789,” at <http://www.senate.gov/reference/Sessions/sessionDates.htm>.

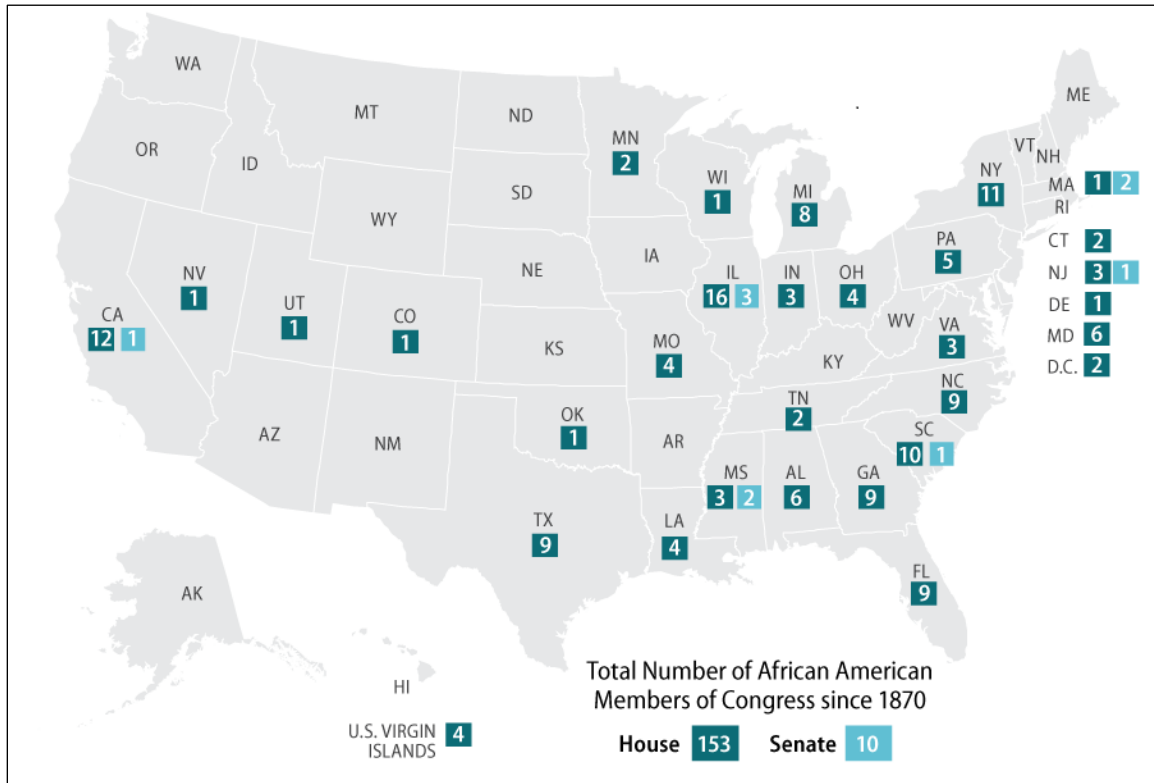

The numbers include Members who served only a portion of the Congress and so may not reflect the number serving at any given time within a Congress.

Service for less than the entirety of a Congress is noted below:

- a. Nonvoting Members may include Delegates and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico. None of the sources used for this report identified an African American Resident Commissioner. All data in this report on nonvoting Members, therefore, refer to Delegates.
- b. Includes two House Members who were elected by special election (serving from December 12, 1870, and January 16, 1871, respectively).
- c. Includes one Senator who presented his credentials upon the readmission of Mississippi and served from February 23, 1870.
- d. Includes two Representatives who served until their elections were contested.
- e. Includes one House Member who resigned.
- f. Includes one House Member who served until their election was contested.
- g. Includes two Representatives who successfully contested an election and served for a portion of the Congress.
- h. Includes one House Member who was elected to fill a vacancy.
- i. Includes one Representative who successfully contested an election and served for a portion of the Congress.
- j. Includes one Representative excluded from membership in the 90th Congress pursuant to H.Res. 278. This same person was subsequently elected by special election to fill the vacancy caused by his exclusion, though he did not appear to be sworn in.
- k. Includes one House Member who died.
- l. Includes one House Member who died and one House Member who resigned.
- m. Includes one House Member who resigned and one House Member who was elected to fill a vacancy.
- n. Includes one House Member who was elected to fill a vacancy and one House Member who died.
- o. Includes two House Members who were elected to fill a vacancy.
- p. Includes three House Members who resigned and four House Members who were elected to fill a vacancy.
- q. Includes two House Members who resigned and two House members who were elected to fill a vacancy.
- r. Includes four Members who were elected to fill a vacancy, three Members who died, and one Member who resigned.
- s. President Barack Obama served in the Senate in the 110th Congress until his resignation on November 16, 2008.
- t. Includes one Senator who was appointed to fill a vacancy.
- u. Includes one Member who died, one who was elected to fill a vacancy, one who resigned, and one who was appointed to the Senate and resigned from the House on January 2, 2013.
- v. Includes three House Members who were elected to fill a vacancy and one House Member who resigned.
- w. Includes one Senator who was appointed to fill a vacancy (February 1, 2013) and one Senator who was elected to fill a vacancy (October 31, 2013).

Figure 2. Number of African Americans in the House and Senate by State, District, or Territory, 1870-Present

(Including any Members who served only a portion of the Congress, as of December 13, 2019)

Source: U.S. Congress, House, Office of the Historian and Office of Art and Archives, “Black Americans in Congress,” <http://history.house.gov/Exhibitions-and-Publications/BAIC/Black-Americans-in-Congress/>.

Notes: 162 African Americans have served in Congress. One African American who has served in both the House and Senate, from South Carolina, is included in both House and Senate tallies in this figure. Delegates are included in the data. The figure also includes Members who served only a portion of the Congress (due, for example, to special elections, appointments to the Senate, deaths, and resignations).

How African Americans Enter Congress: Regular Elections, Special Elections, and Appointments

Article I, Section 2 of the U.S. Constitution requires that all Members of the House of Representatives must be “chosen every second Year by the People of the several States.”

Therefore, all 153 of the African Americans who have served in the House entered office through election, even those who entered after a seat became open during a Congress.

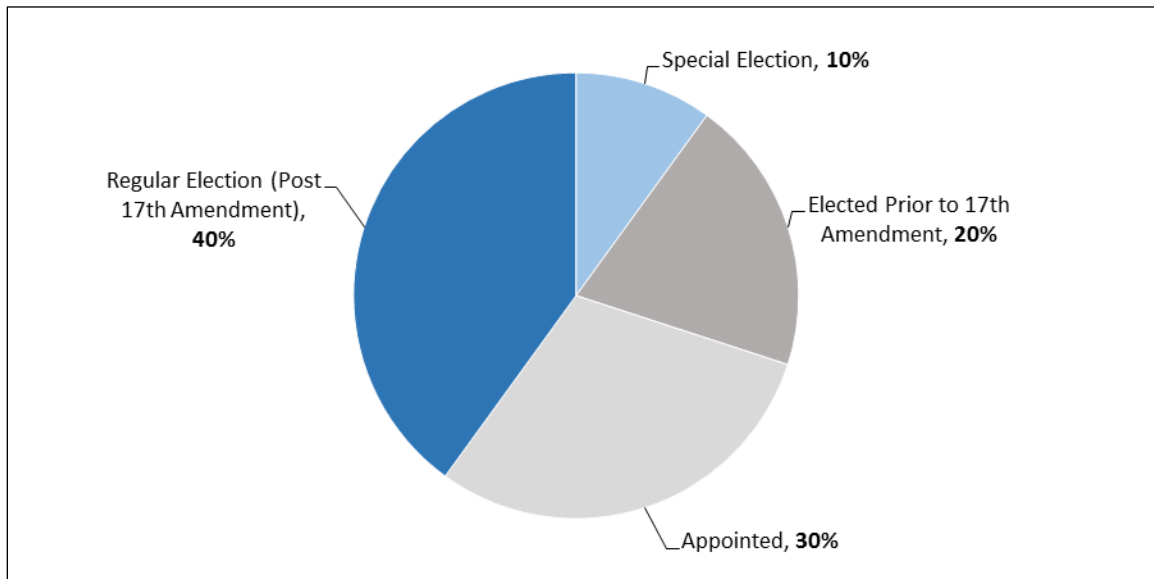

By contrast, the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution, which was ratified in 1913, gives state legislatures the option to empower governors to fill congressional Senate vacancies by temporary appointment. The Seventeenth Amendment also provides for direct elections of Senators by the “people” of a state. Previously, Senators were elected by legislative selection rather than through the direct elections by which Representatives to Congress were elected.¹¹

Of the 10 African Americans who have served in the Senate,

- two were elected prior to the ratification of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution;
- four initially entered Senate service by winning a regular election;
- one initially entered Senate service by winning a special election and was subsequently reelected; and
- three were appointed. Of these three, one was a candidate for reelection and served in more than one Congress.

The Congressional Black Caucus (CBC): A Congressional Member Organization

In 1971, the 13 African Americans then serving in the House established the Congressional Black Caucus.

¹¹ For information on the Seventeenth Amendment, see National Archives, “The Constitution: Amendments 11-27,” at <https://www.archives.gov/founding-docs/amendments-11-27#toc-amendment-xvii>; and Congressional Research Service, “Seventeenth Amendment—Popular Election of Senators,” in Constitution Annotated, at <http://www.crs.gov/conan/details/?mode=topic&doc=Amendment17.xml&t=1&c=1>.

In the 116th Congress, the CBC¹² is one of more than 270 registered congressional member organizations (CMOs) in the House.¹³ House CMOs are required to register with the Committee on House Administration. CMOs do not receive separate funding, and they have not since a change in the Rules of the House adopted for the 104th Congress.¹⁴ Members may use their Members’ Representational Allowance (MRA) to support staff, including shared staff, assigned to CMO duties.¹⁵ Members, rather than the CMO, remain the employing authority, and the CMO is not an independent entity. The committee’s Members’ Congressional Handbook lists a number of additional regulations related to the staffing and funding of CMOs.¹⁶

CMOs are not required to register in the Senate. As in the House, informal congressional groups or organizations do not receive separate funding.

The CBC CMO is distinct from the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, which was established in 1976 and is a §501(c)(3) nonprofit organization.¹⁷

African Americans and Leadership of Congressional Committees

As chair of the Senate Select Committee on the Levees of the Mississippi River (45th Congress), Blanche K. Bruce was the first African American to chair any congressional committee. As chair of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments (81st Congress), William L. Dawson was the first African American to chair a House committee. In total,

- 23 African Americans have chaired a House committee;
- 1 African American has chaired a Senate committee; and
- 2 African American Representatives have chaired a joint committee.

These chairmanships include standing, special, and select committees. Some African Americans have chaired multiple committees in the House.²⁰

In the 116th Congress, four African American Representatives currently chair four different House standing committees.²¹
