Major Votes on Free Trade Agreements and Trade Promotion Authority

Congress plays a key role in shaping U.S. trade policy. While the President has authority to negotiate with foreign countries, Congress has sole constitutional authority to regulate international trade. Since 1934, Congress has periodically delegated certain trade agreement negotiating authorities to the President and has required congressional approval of some trade agreements through implementing legislation. Since 1979, Congress has passed 17 implementing measures for FTAs and multilateral trade agreements. Most recently, Congress considered and approved the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) (P.L. 116-113).

Congress also periodically considers legislation to grant Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) to the President for limited time periods. Through TPA legislation, Congress delegates certain trade agreement negotiating authorities to the President; defines specific trade negotiation objectives; and sets consultation requirements. TPA legislation also outlines the terms, requirements, and procedures for FTA implementing legislation to receive expedited consideration in Congress. All but one of the 17 trade agreements approved by Congress since 1979 were considered in Congress under TPA.

Since 1979, Congress has passed six measures extending TPA for limited time periods. The most recent TPA was passed in 2015; this authority expired on July 1, 2021, potentially complicating the Administration's future trade negotiations. As with many international trade issues, TPA has been politically contentious over time, resulting in vigorous debate and three notable lapses in authority, including the current lapse.

Congress also has a specific role in determining U.S. membership to the World Trade Organization (WTO). Congress first approved U.S. membership in the international organization in 1994, by passing the implementing legislation for the WTO Uruguay Round Agreements. The implementing legislation also established a procedure whereby Congress can withdraw the United States from the WTO through a joint resolution. In the 116th Congress, two resolutions were introduced to withdraw U.S. membership from the WTO; neither were brought up for a vote.

The following report and tables compile the final congressional votes on FTAs, TPA, and U.S. membership to the WTO.

Congress and Free Trade Agreements

This report compiles the final congressional votes on free trade agreements (FTAs), trade promotion authority (TPA), and U.S. membership to the World Trade Organization (WTO).

In the past 30 years, the United States has pursued bilateral, regional, and multilateral trade agreements in an attempt to liberalize markets and reduce trade and investment barriers. Congress has played a central role in shaping this trade policy. Congress—through debate and legislation—defines trade negotiation priorities and approves FTAs. Congress also helps oversee agreements’ implementation and enforcement.

While the President has the authority to negotiate treaties with foreign countries, Congress has sole constitutional authority to regulate international trade.<sup>1</sup> Since 1934, Congress has periodically delegated some authority to negotiate trade agreements to the President. In the Trade Act of 1974, Congress outlined many of the congressional and executive roles regarding trade agreements; Congress delegated negotiation authority to the President, but required congressional approval (through implementation legislation) of FTAs. Congress also created a process to allow for expedited consideration of trade agreement implementing legislation, provided that the President observe certain statutory requirements.<sup>2</sup> This expedient consideration is known as TPA or, formerly, “fast-track” consideration.<sup>3</sup>

Free Trade Agreements: Bilateral and Regional

The United States is currently party to 12 bilateral FTAs (with Australia, Bahrain, Chile, Colombia, Israel, Jordan, South Korea, Morocco, Oman, Panama, Peru, and Singapore) and to two regional FTAs (United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) and the Dominican Republic-Central America-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR)). (For a list and timeline of FTAs, see Table 1. For a compilation of final congressional votes on FTAs considered by Congress, see Table 2.) These FTAs are considered comprehensive trade agreements, covering “substantially all trade” between partners. The United States has also negotiated more limited agreements that have focused on select bilateral trade and tariff issues; recent examples include the “phase one” agreements with China and Japan and a limited tariff agreement with the European Union. This report does not cover these limited-scope agreements, as they have not required congressional approval or non-tariff-related changes to U.S. law.<sup>4</sup>

Multilateral Trade Agreements and the World Trade Organization

In addition to bilateral and regional FTAs, the United States is also party to multilateral trade agreements that outline membership in the WTO, a 164-member international organization. The WTO was created in 1995 to oversee and administer multilateral trade rules, serve as a forum for trade liberalization negotiations, and resolve trade disputes.<sup>5</sup> When Congress approved the WTO Uruguay Round Agreements, it included a set of procedures to allow Congress to reconsider U.S. membership in the WTO by passing a joint resolution calling for withdrawal from the organization.<sup>6</sup> Congress may vote every five years on withdrawal from the WTO. Resolutions were introduced in the House during the 106th and 109th Congress; neither passed. In the 116th Congress, two resolutions to withdraw from the WTO were introduced (H.J.Res. 89 and S.J.Res. 71); neither were brought up for a vote. See Table 3 for a compilation of major legislation and votes concerning U.S. membership to the WTO.

Trade Promotion Authority

Implementing legislation for all U.S. FTAs, except the agreement with Jordan, was considered in Congress under Trade Promotion Authority (TPA). TPA is the process by which Congress enables FTA legislation to be considered under expedited legislative procedures, provided the President observes certain statutory obligations. Because TPA is extended only for limited periods, Congress periodically considers legislation to extend it and to outline future trade negotiation objectives and consultation requirements. Since 1974, Congress has passed seven measures extending TPA. Most recently, Congress passed TPA legislation in 2015 (via the Bipartisan Congressional Trade Priorities and Accountability Act of 2015, P.L. 114-26); this authority lapsed on July 1, 2021. TPA, like many issues related to international trade, has been politically contentious in Congress over time, resulting in vigorous debate and two previous eight-year lapses in authority.<sup>7</sup> For a list of major votes on TPA, see Table 4.

Congressional Votes on Select Trade Legislation

Congressional consideration of bills can be a complex process, sometimes requiring multiple votes. For clarity's sake, this report only provides the final vote for each measure. More complete bill information can be found on Congress.gov—including roll call votes for all legislation back to 1993. The bill numbers listed in the following tables link to Congress.gov, and the vote tallies link to the House and Senate roll call votes, for all votes back to 1993.

Table 1 provides a timeline of FTAs including the date the agreement was signed, the date implementing legislation was enacted, and the date the agreement went into force. The table also notes the TPA legislation under which the trade agreement was considered in Congress. The table includes comprehensive FTAs that have entered into force and have required congressional approval. This table does not include limited-scope agreements that have not required <sup>6</sup> Section 125(b) of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (P.L. 103-465) sets procedures for congressional disapproval of WTO participation. It specifies that Congress's approval of the WTO agreement shall cease to be effective "if and only if" Congress enacts a joint resolution calling for withdrawal. Congress may vote every five years on withdrawal.

<sup>7</sup> TPA lapsed for multiple years between 1994 and 2002 and between 2007 and 2015. For more on TPA, see CRS Report R43491, Trade Promotion Authority (TPA): Frequently Asked Questions, by Ian F. Fergusson and Christopher M. Davis.

The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) was a proposed FTA, signed by the United States and 11 other Asia-Pacific countries on Feb. 4, 2016. In Jan. 2017, the United States notified the other TPP signatories that it would not ratify the agreement, effectively ending TPP's potential entry into force as written. The remaining TPP signatories made limited modifications to TPP after the U.S. withdrawal and signed a new agreement, the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP). The CPTPP entered into force among Australia, Canada, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, and Singapore in 2018, for Vietnam in 2019, and for Peru in 2021.

- a. Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) is the legislation that grants the President authority to negotiate trade agreements for which implementing legislation may receive expedited treatment in Congress.
- b. The U.S.-Mexico-Canada Trade Agreement (USMCA) superseded the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).
- c. CAFTA-DR (Dominican Republic-Central America-United States FTA) includes Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and the Dominican Republic.
- d. CAFTA-DR entered into force on a rolling basis as the President certified each country's compliance with the agreement: El Salvador (March 1, 2006); Honduras and Nicaragua (April 1, 2006); Guatemala (July 1, 2006); the Dominican Republic (March 1, 2007); and Costa Rica (January 1, 2009).
- e. NAFTA (the North American Free Trade Agreement) included Mexico and Canada, and was superseded by USMCA.
- f. The U.S.-Canada FTA was superseded by NAFTA.

For more detailed bill information, the bill numbers above link to Congress.gov, and the vote tallies link to the House and Senate roll call votes, where available. In a few examples (Oman, CAFTA-DR, Morocco), the Senate passed an implementing bill before the House version. The Senate later considered and passed the House version of the bill, as revenue-generating bills must originate in the House. The Senate bills that received a vote are included in the above table.

- a. USMCA, the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Trade Agreement, superseded NAFTA.
- b. CAFTA-DR is the Dominican Republic-Central America-United States FTA, and includes Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and the Dominican Republic.
- c. NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, included Mexico and Canada and was superseded by USMCA.
- d. U.S.-Canada FTA was effectively superseded by NAFTA.

Notes: The Uruguay Round of the World Trade Organization (WTO) included a series of multilateral agreements that established the WTO and outlined trade rules and membership to the international organization. The President signed the Uruguay Round Agreements on April 15, 1994. Congress considered implementation legislation for the agreements under the TPA provisions in the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988. The implementation act was signed into law on December 8, 1994, and the Uruguay Round Agreements went into force on January 1, 1995.

Section 125(b) of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (P.L. 103-465) sets procedures for congressional disapproval of WTO participation. It specifies that Congress's approval of the WTO agreements shall cease to be effective "if and only if" Congress enacts a joint resolution calling for withdrawal. Congress may vote every five years on withdrawal.

Notes: Bolded titles were enacted into law. For more detailed bill information, the bill numbers above link to Congress.gov. In addition to the current lapse in TPA, there were two notable lapses: between 1994 and 2002 and between 2007 and 2015. For more on TPA, see CRS Report R43491, Trade Promotion Authority (TPA): Frequently Asked Questions, by Ian F. Fergusson and Christopher M. Davis.

- a. The measure was voted on in the House under a procedure known as “division of the question,” which requires separate votes on each component, but approval of both to pass. Title I concerning TPA passed the House; however, Title II, concerning trade adjustment assistance, failed. Thus, the measure failed, under “division of the question.” (House roll call votes on H.R. 1314: Title I (TPA): Roll no. 362, 6/12/2015; Title II: Roll no. 361, 6/12/2015.)
- b. Roll call vote 193, 5/22/2015.
