Introduction

This report provides a map of parliamentary and presidential elections that have been held or are scheduled to be held at the national level in Europe in 2022, and a table of recent and upcoming parliamentary and presidential elections at the national level in Europe. It includes dates for direct elections only, and excludes indirect elections.¹

Europe is defined in this product as the fifty countries under the portfolio of the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of European and Eurasian Affairs. The report does not include the Holy See (Vatican City), as there are not any direct presidential or parliamentary elections held there. Electoral rules and governance structures can vary widely across European countries.

Eleven European countries have held or are scheduled to hold direct presidential and/or parliamentary elections in 2022. Some dates may be subject to change due to snap elections, parliamentary votes of no confidence, the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic, or other factors. Thus far in 2022, snap elections are scheduled to be held in Portugal and Serbia.²

Parliament, or the legislative body, may be unicameral, with one legislative chamber, or bicameral, with a lower and upper chamber. In bicameral systems, the lower chamber is usually directly elected by the people and is the more powerful of the two (for example, the House of Commons in the United Kingdom). The upper chamber is frequently appointed or indirectly elected, and has more limited powers (for example, the House of Lords in the United Kingdom). Both the lower and upper chambers are directly elected in six countries (Czech Republic, Italy, Poland, Romania, Spain, and Switzerland).

The presidential election process in European countries varies.³ In the majority of European countries, presidents or heads of state are elected directly by the people in a popular vote; however, in thirteen countries, presidents are indirectly elected by Members of Parliament.⁴ There are twelve monarchies in Europe, including the Holy See.⁵ In lieu of a president, monarchs

² In a parliamentary system, a snap election is an election that is held prior to its regularly scheduled date. Such elections are often called by the ruling leader when party leaders believe they will make electoral gains.

⁴ The thirteen countries are Albania, Armenia, Estonia, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Kosovo, Latvia, Malta, San Marino, and Switzerland.

typically serve as the head of state with limited or ceremonial powers.⁶ In these instances, presidential elections are denoted as N/A or non-applicable in the table below.

CRS has gathered the information presented in this report from numerous sources, including the U.S. Department of State, Central Intelligence Agency's (CIA's) World Factbook, International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) Election Guide, Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU), and other news sources.

Figure 1 includes a map and calendar of the European parliamentary and presidential elections scheduled to be held in 2022, including those already held.

Table 1 provides the dates of the last and next parliamentary and presidential direct elections in Europe. The "last election/runoff" column displays the dates of the most recent direct parliamentary and/or presidential elections. In many instances, the "last election/runoff" column includes more than one date, as parliamentary and/or presidential elections may occur in two-rounds with the top two candidates from an initial election advancing to a runoff election if no candidate receives a majority (this is the system in France).

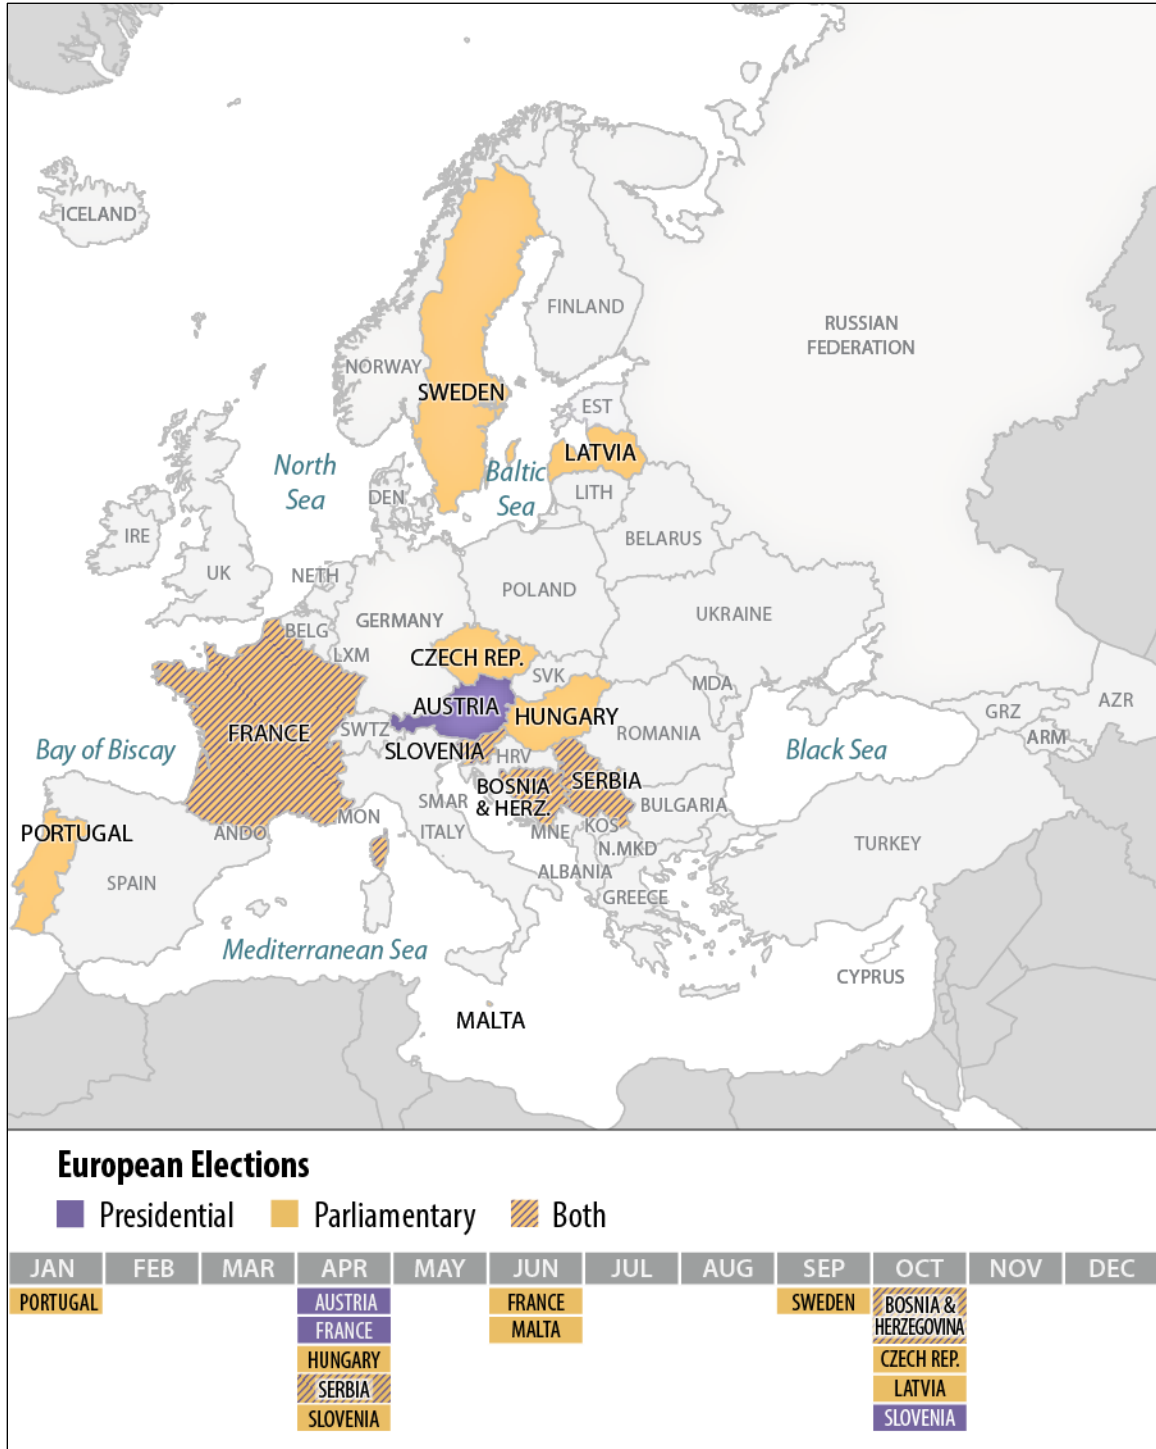

The "next election" column indicates the projected date when the next direct national election is expected to be held, based on law or practice. In most European countries, general elections occur at least once every four to six years. Unless laws or decisions in a particular country set a specific election day, dates are calculated based on the dates of the most recent election and length of the term. Elections that are expected to occur by a specific month/year are listed in the table according to that month/year.

European Elections in 2022

Eleven European countries are scheduled to hold presidential and/or parliamentary elections in 2022. These dates may be subject to change due to snap elections, parliamentary votes of no confidence, the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic, or other factors.

⁶ Some parliamentary systems, such as that of the United Kingdom, coexist with hereditary monarchies. In these systems, called parliamentary constitutional monarchies, monarchs typically serve as the head of state with limited or ceremonial powers. Prime ministers serve as the head of government, and may be appointed formally by the monarch, based on election results and often with the approval of parliament.

Notes: Table is current as of January 3, 2022. Europe is defined as the fifty countries (excluding the Holy See) under the portfolio of the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of European and Eurasian Affairs. N/A means non-applicable. The "last election/runoff" column may include more than one date, as parliamentary and/or presidential elections may often occur in two-rounds with the top two candidates from an initial election advancing to a runoff election if no candidate receives a majority. Unless a country sets a specific election day, dates in the "next election" column are calculated based on the dates of the most recent election and length of the term. Elections that are expected to occur by a specific month/year are listed in the table according to that month/year.

- a. Armenia originally had elections scheduled for December 2023, but held snap elections on June 20, 2021. The prime minister announced the snap elections to address the political opposition that arose following a cease-fire agreement that he signed with Azerbaijan over Nagorno-Karabakh. See CRS Report R46651, Azerbaijan and Armenia: The Nagorno-Karabakh Conflict, by Cory Welt and Andrew S. Bowen.
- b. Presidential elections in Austria were held in two rounds on April 24, 2016 and May 22, 2016. In the second round of voting, Alexander Van der Bellen, the Green Party-backed candidate, had narrowly defeated Norbert Hofer of the Freedom Party. However, the Freedom Party appealed the results. The Constitutional Court annulled the results of the second round, citing vote-counting irregularities. A second round of voting was held on Dec. 4, 2016 (delayed from Oct. 2, 2016 due to concerns over faulty envelop glue).
- c. Azerbaijan, Belarus and Russia are considered "authoritarian" governments according to Freedom House's Freedom in the World 2021. See Sarah Repucci and Amy Slipowitz, Freedom in the World 2021: Democracy Under Siege, Freedom House, 2021, at https://freedomhouse.org/sites/default/files/2021-02/FIW2021_World_02252021_FINAL-web-upload.pdf. For more information on Belarus and Russia, see: CRS In Focus IF10814, Belarus: An Overview, by Cory Welt and CRS Report R46518, Russia: Domestic Politics and Economy, by Cory Welt and Rebecca M. Nelson.
- d. The Bulgarian president called a snap parliamentary election for July 11, 2021 after his attempts to form a government failed following the April 4, 2021 elections. The July 2021 elections also failed to result in the formation of a government, and a third parliamentary election was held on November 14, 2021, along with presidential elections. See CRS In Focus IF11725, Bulgaria: An Overview, by Sarah E. Garding.
- e. Constitutional amendments in 2017 changed the presidential elections to an indirect election. The 2018 presidential election in Georgia was the last in which the president was directly elected. Beginning in 2023, Georgia's president will be elected by Members of Parliament and local government representatives. See CRS Report R45307, Georgia: Background and U.S. Policy, by Cory Welt.
- f. On April 28, 2021, the Moldovan president announced the dissolution of parliament and called snap elections for July 11, 2021.
- g. In November 2021, the Portuguese president announced plans to dissolve parliament and call a snap election on January 30, 2022.
- h. Parliamentary elections in Serbia were supposed to occur in 2024. However, in October 2020, President Aleksandar Vucic announced that snap parliamentary election would be held earlier. Parliamentary elections are expected to be held alongside the presidential elections on April 3, 2022.
- i. Each canton in Switzerland organizes its elections for the Council of States. The first round of the election to the Swiss Council of States is held at the same time as elections to the National Council in all cantons, with one exception. The canton of Appenzell Innerrhoden holds its elections on the last Sunday in April (last election was Apr. 28, 2019). Depending on the results of the election, a second round or runoff election may be required in some cantons.
- j. On April 16, 2017, a constitutional referendum was held on amending the Turkish Constitution, including abolishing the office of the Prime Minister and replacing the country's existing parliamentary system with a presidential system. The referendum passed. On June 24, 2018, Turkey held snap elections, re-electing President Recep Tayyip Erdoğan. "With the elimination of the prime minister's post, President Erdoğan now controls all executive functions ... and the capacity of the parliament to provide a check on his rule is, in practice, seriously limited," according to Freedom House's Freedom in the World 2021. See Sarah Repucci and Amy Slipowitz, Freedom in the World 2021: Democracy Under Siege, Freedom House, 2021, at https://freedomhouse.org/sites/default/files/2021-02/FIW2021_World_02252021_FINAL-web-upload.pdf.
