U.S. Intelligence Community Establishment Provisions

The concept of a unified U.S. Intelligence Community (IC) consisting of integrated component departments and agencies began to take shape after World War II, in part through the establishment of the Central Intelligence Agency. Before this, U.S. intelligence organizations had existed within the military services and largely operated independently of one another. U.S. government references to an “Intelligence Community” first appear in the mid-1950s. The components of the IC were first specified in statute by the Intelligence Organization Act of 1992 (Title VII of P.L. 102-496). The IC has since evolved into a federated community of 18 components spread across two independent agencies and six separate departments of the federal government.

Table 1 summarizes dates and directives for the establishment of each of the 18 IC component organizations. Some organizations, such as the Navy’s Office of Naval Intelligence, predate the emergence of the IC concept. Although not included in statute as an element of the IC, the establishment of the position of Under Secretary of Defense (Intelligence and Security) (USD(I&S)) is included in this listing in reflection of the leadership the USD(I&S) exercises over Department of Defense intelligence programs in coordination with the Director of National Intelligence.

Established by Congressional Action
Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)	September 18, 1947	P.L. 80-253 (National Security Act of 1947) §102, codified in 50 U.S.C. §3035.
Department of Energy, Office of Intelligence and Counterintelligence (DOE/IN)	August 4, 1977	P.L. 95-91 (DOE Organization Act of 1977) §215, codified in 42 U.S.C. §7144b(b) and amended by P.L. 109-364 §3117 and P.L. 116-92 §6421.
Department of Defense (DOD), National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency (NGA)	October 1, 1996	The National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA) was established by P.L. 104-201 (National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) for FY1997). NIMA was renamed NGA in 2003 under §921 of P.L. 108-136 (FY2004 NDAA). Codified in 10 U.S.C. §441.
Department of Homeland Security (DHS), U.S. Coast Guard Intelligence (USCG/IN)	December 28, 2001	P.L. 107-108 §105 (Intelligence Authorization Act (IAA) for FY2002), codified in 50 U.S.C. §3003(4)(H). <sup>b</sup>
DHS, Office of Intelligence and Analysis (DHS/OIA)	November 25, 2002	P.L. 107-296 (Homeland Security Act of 2002) §201, codified in 6 U.S.C. §121.
DOD, Under Secretary of Defense (Intelligence & Security) (USD(I&S))	December 2, 2002	P.L. 107-314 (FY2003 NDAA) §901, codified in 10 U.S.C. §137.

Notes:

- IC elements are defined in 50 U.S.C. §3003, which also includes a provision for admitting additional elements to the IC by a decision of either the President or jointly by the DNI and the head of the department of agency concerned.

- The FBI's DI can be traced back to the origins of the FBI (established January 26, 1908 as the Bureau of Investigation; renamed FBI in 1935). December 17, 2004 marks the first of a number of changes to integrate the FBI's intelligence-related activities with those of the IC. See George W. Bush, Memorandum on Strengthening the Ability of the Department of Justice To Meet Challenges to the Security of the Nation, June 28, 2005. In March 2006, §506 of P.L. 109-177 created the National Security Division (NSD) within the Department of Justice (DOJ) headed by an Assistant Attorney General for National Security. Within the NSD is DOJ's Office of Intelligence (OI), which is not an IC element.

- E.O. 9621 transferred several functions of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) to other departments. The OSS's Research and Analysis Branch was resubordinated to the State Department and renamed the Bureau of Intelligence and Research (INR).
