This report provides information on selected health provisions that have expired or are scheduled to expire during the 119th Congress (i.e., calendar years [CYs] 2025 and 2026). For purposes of this report, expiring provisions are defined as portions of law that are time-limited and will lapse once a statutory deadline is reached, absent further legislative action. The expiring provisions included in this report are any identified provisions related to Medicare, Medicaid, the State Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), or private health insurance programs and activities. The report also includes any identified expired or expiring public health and other health care-related provisions. In addition, this report describes health provisions within the same scope that expired during the 118th Congress (i.e., in CY2023 and CY2024). Although the Congressional Research Service (CRS) has attempted to be comprehensive in its research, it cannot guarantee that every relevant provision is included in this report.

This report focuses on two types of health provisions within the scope discussed above. The first, and most common, type of provision provides or controls mandatory spending, meaning it provides temporary funding, temporary increases or decreases in funding or payment rates (e.g., Medicare provider bonus payments), or temporary special protections that may result in changes in funding levels (e.g., Medicare funding provisions that establish a payment floor). The second type of provision defines the authority of government agencies or other entities to act, usually by authorizing a policy, project, or activity, and includes a definitive expiration or “sunset” date. Such provisions also may temporarily delay the implementation of a regulation, requirement, or deadline or establish a moratorium on a particular activity. Expiring health provisions that are discretionary authorizations of appropriations are excluded from this report.

Certain types of provisions with expiration dates that otherwise would meet the criteria set forth above are also excluded from this report. Some of these provisions are excluded because they are transitional or routine in nature or because they have been superseded by congressional action that modifies their intent. For example, statutorily required Medicare payment rate reductions and payment rate re-basings that are implemented over a specified period are generally not considered to require repeated legislative attention and are excluded from this report. In addition, this report excludes provisions providing implementation funding, such as the implementation funding provided for a number of the Medicaid provisions and the Rural Health Transformation Program in P.L. 119-21, the 2025 Reconciliation Act.

The tables in this report list the relevant health provisions that have expired or are scheduled to expire in CY2025 and CY2026 and those that expired in CY2023 and CY2024.

This report identifies and briefly describes selected statutory health provisions that have expired or are scheduled to expire during the 119th Congress (i.e., during calendar years [CYs] 2025 and 2026). For purposes of this report, expiring provisions are defined as portions of law that are time-limited and will lapse once a statutory deadline is reached, absent further legislative action. The expiring provisions included in this report are any identified provisions related to Medicare, Medicaid, the State Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), or private health insurance programs and activities. The report also includes any identified expiring public health and other health care-related provisions.¹ Separately, the report describes health provisions within the same scope that expired during the 118th Congress (i.e., during CY2023 and CY2024). Although the Congressional Research Service (CRS) has attempted to be comprehensive in its research, it cannot guarantee that every relevant provision is included in this report.

The two types of time-limited provisions discussed in this report generally have been enacted in the context of authorization laws and thus typically are within the purview of congressional authorizing committees. The duration for which such a provision is in effect usually is regarded as creating a timeline for legislative decisionmaking. In choosing this timeline, Congress navigates tradeoffs between the frequency of congressional review and the stability of funding or other legal requirements that pertain to the program.

- The first type of provision in this report provides or controls mandatory spending, meaning it provides temporary funding, temporary increases or decreases in funding or payment rates (e.g., Medicare provider bonus payments), or temporary special protections that may result in changes in funding levels (e.g., Medicare funding provisions that establish a payment floor).²
- The second type of provision in this report defines the authority of government agencies or other entities to act, usually by authorizing a policy, project, demonstration or pilot program, or activity with a date of expiration.³ Such provisions also may temporarily delay the implementation of a regulation, requirement, or deadline, or they may establish a moratorium on a particular activity.

Expired or expiring health provisions that are discretionary authorizations of appropriations are excluded from this report.⁴ For information on provisions that were set to expire on or before CY2025, see CBO, Expired and Expiring Authorizations of Appropriations: 2025 Final Report, July 10, 2025. One notable exception to this exclusion is that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and National Institutes of Health (NIH) funds authorized under the 21st Century Cures Act are included in this report; these funds are subject to special budget enforcement rules that cause them to not count toward the discretionary spending limit in a given fiscal year.

¹ This report is the latest in a series of reports in which the Congressional Research Service (CRS) has tracked health-expiring provisions related to Medicare, Medicaid, the State Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), or private health insurance. This is the first time this report has included public health and other health care-related provisions.

² Mandatory spending is controlled by authorization acts; discretionary spending is controlled by appropriations acts. For further information, see CRS Report R44582, Overview of Funding Mechanisms in the Federal Budget Process, and Selected Examples.

⁴ The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) is required to compile this information each year under §202(e)(3) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-344, as amended); see CBO, Expired and Expiring Authorizations of Appropriations: 2025 Final Report, July 10, 2025, at <https://www.cbo.gov/publication/61289>.

Also, certain types of provisions with expiration dates that otherwise would meet the criteria set forth above are excluded from this report. Some of these provisions are excluded because they are transitional or routine in nature, such as requiring certain reports to Congress, or because they have been superseded by congressional action that otherwise modifies their intent. For example, statutorily required Medicare payment rate reductions and payment rate re-basings that are implemented over a specified period are generally not considered to require legislative attention and are excluded from this report. In addition, this report excludes provisions providing implementation funding, such as the implementation funding provided for a number of the Medicaid provisions and the Rural Health Transformation Program in P.L. 119-21, the 2025 Reconciliation Act.⁵

The report is organized as follows: Table 1 lists the relevant provisions that have expired or are scheduled to expire in CY2025. Table 2 lists the relevant provisions that are scheduled to expire in CY2026. Table 3 lists the relevant provisions that expired in CY2023 and CY2024. The provisions in each table are organized by expiration date and by applicable health-related program (e.g., Medicare, Medicaid, Private Health Insurance, and Other). Each table includes a brief summary for each provision and the name of the CRS analyst who covers the topic. Contact information for each CRS analyst is available to congressional clients at the end of the report.

⁵ For more information about the provisions in P.L. 119-21, the 2025 Reconciliation Act with implementation funding, see CRS Report R48633, Health Provisions in P.L. 119-21, the FY2025 Reconciliation Law.
